B.C. Awaits Word With Bated Breath

- Breath test laws still workable, says Lang. Page 3

Just what did the Supreme Court of Canada mean Thursday when it ruled a motorist has a right to speak to his lawyer before agreeing to take a breath analysis test?

Police forces in Greater Victoria weren't sure and were awaiting instructions from the provincial attorney-general's department before making major changes in procedure.

The attorney-general's department, in turn, was awaiting clarification from Ottawa and legal sources predicted it might be a day or two before it would be known if Canada's official breath-analysis machine for suspected drinking drivers is useful or not.

The key question facing police is whether the highest court's ruling that a motorist can speak to his lawyer means over the telephone or face to face.

In Victoria, Police Chief John Gregory said there would really be no change in procedure if it meant only over the telephone. He pointed out all accused have the right to make a phone call and that could be to a lawyer.

But Canadian courts will not accept breath-analysis machine results if they are taken more than two hours after the incident that caused

He'll Seek Tisdalle Seat

Tory Tag for Curtis

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis will announce this morning that he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the provincial riding of Saanich and the Islands.

The formal announcement of his candidacy will be made by Curtis and B.C. Conservative leader Derril Warren at a news conference scheduled for 10 a.m. today.

Curtis' decision to run for the Tories in Saanich-Islands raises the prospect of a head-on clash between Liberals and Conservatives in the riding with indications that B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson may also choose to run there.

Malcolm Anderson, president of the Saanich Liberal Association, said Thursday a provincial candidate would be nominated July 10 and he told reporters he has been pressing his brother David to run in this riding.

"As president I want David to seek the nomination in Saanich and I've been pressing him to run," Anderson said. David Anderson will make his final decision known at a news conference tentatively scheduled for the Red Lion Inn, in Saanich, one week from today.

In 1969, the Liberals ran a poor third in Saanich and the Islands, tallying only roughly one-third of the votes gained by Socred John Tisdale. The Conservatives didn't run a candidate in the riding in the last election.

This time, however, Tisdalle, who previously had won the seat in six elections for Social Credit, narrowly lost his party's nomination to Victoria lawyer Foster Isherwood, 49, of 3615 Cadboro Bay. There has been some speculation since then that Tisdalle may contest the seat as an independent.

With all Greater Victoria seats solidly in the Socred camp in 1969, Anderson and Curtis among others have faced a dilemma in deciding where to run in the forthcoming election.

The Liberal leader is still reported to be unable to make up his mind whether to seek one of two Victoria seats or run in Saanich-Islands, with a

Chichester:

'I Am Weak, Cold'

LONDON (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, Britain's lone round-the-world mariner who has been competing in the transatlantic singlehanded yacht race, was reported Thursday night to be in trouble as he sailed Gipsy Moth V back toward home.

"I am weak and cold," the ailing 70-year-old Chichester signalled by lamp to a Royal Air Force Nimrod search aircraft.

Chichester flashed his message twice to the aircraft, which has been tracking his progress since he was first sighted Tuesday after not being heard from for 11 days.

Chichester, who defied doctors' orders to tackle the marathon ocean crossing, has dropped out of the race. He is believed to be heading for the French coast. One of his messages to the Nimrod said he hoped his son would meet him in Brest.

Cartier caught by camera

Solution Was A Snap

A camera trap, devised by Arthur Rees 12 years ago after his home was broken into, was the instrument of Cartier's arrest in April when it snapped a picture of him entering the Rees home carrying a gun.

A burglar alarm, connected to a $7.50 camera, alerted a neighbor of the Rees, who were out of town at the time. Police were called and told about the camera. The film was developed by the department's identification branch.

A short time later, police arrested two youths on a charge of possession of housebreaking tools. While they were being booked into police cells, the constable who developed the film recognized one of them as the youth in the housebreaking picture.

AP, UPI, Reuter

President Nixon said in Washington Thursday night the U.S. and North Vietnam have agreed to resume the Paris peace talks. He said the administration has agreed to resume the suspended Vietnam negotiations on Thursday, July 13.

However, Nixon emphasized the move is being made "on the assumption that the North Vietnamese are prepared to negotiate in a constructive and serious way."

Nixon apparently erred in a reference to the date of the resumption. He said the talks would be renewed April 13, but apparently meant July 13, a Thursday, and the normal meeting day before the negotiations were broken off in April. And a few minutes later he spoke of a July resumption.

"I've already indicated that we will be returning to negotiations in July," Nixon told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference. "That is the important area to watch."

At the outset of his first broadcast news conference in more than a year, Nixon was asked whether he could say that the war in Vietnam will be ended by next Jan. 20, when his term expires.

He recited the record of troop withdrawals, reduced U.S. casualties and spending, and administration peace offers.

Nixon said the only thing the administration has not done is to agree to a Communist government in Saigon, which he said would "reward aggression . . . and would dishonor the United States of America."

Nixon said the effect of the American mining of North Vietnam harbors and the bombing has been that "the situation in Vietnam has been turned around."

He said: "The South Vietnamese now are on the offensive."

'Not Unusual'

Press Talks Broken

Talks between Victoria Press Ltd. and the Victoria Newspaper Council of Unions broke off Thursday.

No future meetings have been scheduled. The two sides are in a legal position to strike or lock out.

"Negotiations came to a standstill today," said J. C. Melville, general manager of Victoria Press Ltd. "However, this is not unusual in discussions of this kind. The important thing is that both sides are intent on seeking a settlement and are now exploring ways that will bring this about."

Still in dispute are wages, pensions and term of agreement. Other matters peculiar to individual unions are reportedly still unresolved.

The five unions, bargaining together as a council for the first time, are the newspaper guild, typographical union, printing pressmen, stereotypers and mailers. They represent 330 employees of the morning Colonist and evening Times.

'Shabby Dealing'

McGovern's Delegates Decimated

Associated Press

Senator George McGovern, trembling with anger, said Thursday he will not support the Democratic ticket if his own quest is denied and the presidential nomination goes to a rival who helped strip him of 151 California delegates.

Senator Hubert Humphrey, whose allies led the California challenge, declared his prospects "have markedly improved."

Senator Edmund Muskie's campaign manager said his man is "back in the race very strong." Muskie smiled and said the Democratic national convention will be more interesting now.

The political storm broke over the verdict of the Democratic credentials committee, which voted 72 to 66 to take from McGovern more than half the delegates he won by capturing the California presidential primary June 6.

The national convention itself will make the final decision.

'Visible Bruises from Chute'

Navy Vet Charged as Hijacker

DETROIT (UPI) — A 28-year-old jobless navy veteran was charged Thursday with air piracy as the hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner over Indiana Saturday with $502,000 in ransom.

Martin Joseph McNally had $12 in his possession when FBI agents arrested him late Wednesday night near his home in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb about 150 miles from Peru, Ind., where the ransom money was found in a soybean field Monday.

Fingerprints found in the American Airlines 727 jetliner linked Martin with the hijacking, Welch said.

It had been thought the hijacker of the plane, which was commandeered as it was en route from St. Louis to Tulsa, Okla., Friday night, would be found dead near the spot where a farmer found the money, intact in a mail pouch.

There was evidence, said Welch, "that when the hijacker leaped from the plane, the money, his guns and his trousers were ripped away by the tremendous shock of the jet blast."

"We thought the blast would kill him," said Welch at a pre-dawn news conference following McNally's arrest.

Lewis Hits Quebec Wing

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Leader David Lewis repudiated Thursday a new program on federalism launched by the NDP's Quebec wing, leaving open the possibility that adherents to the Quebec platform would be drummed out of the party.

Lewis called a news conference hastily to denounce the program even before the Quebec executive had released it.

The disagreement followed the expulsion Sunday of the left-wing Waffle group from the Ontario NDP.

Lewis said parts of the Quebec program, including stress on the eventuality of Quebec's separation, is clearly contrary to the policies of the NDP adopted at a national convention in April, 1971.

Lewis refused to say what the party's reaction would be to candidates in a federal election who espouse the deviation proposal of the Quebec executive.

Sample of new licence

All new drivers licences issued in B.C. starting Tuesday will carry a color photograph of the holder for identification purposes and will be the size and shape of a credit card.

Attorney-General Lesie Peterson introduced the new system at a press conference in the Motor Vehicle Branch offices here late Thursday and was presented with his own new-style driver's licence by motor vehicle superintendent Ray Hadfield.

Photographs will be taken at local licence offices at the time of application and motorists will be issued an interim licence for use during the processing period. New licences carrying pictures will be mailed to the applicants.

Peterson said the new system was introduced primarily to "make identification easier and assist law enforcement agencies."

He added that with the point system now in effect in B.C. motorists who lose their right to drive must be able to be closely checked by police.

The new credit card format the attorney-general said, is recognition of the fact that the driver's licence has become an almost universal form of identification.

Renewals of driver's licences will cost the same — $5 — under the new system, Hadfield later told reporters, but duplicates will be issued in the new format with picture for $2 instead of the old fee of 50 cents.

The motor vehicles superintendent said it was estimated with the increased interest anticipated in the new form of licences about 35,000 would be issued in the first month.

The Toronto firm, Indenticard Ltd., has a contract to provide cameras and processing of the pictures of licence holders at a cost of 56 cents each. It is expected there will be a roll-over of some 1.8 million licences in the next five year period.

The number of drivers' licences currently issued in B.C. is about 1.25 million.

The attorney-general said the $5, five-year driver's licence issued in B.C. is "one of the best bargains you can get anywhere in Canada today. The licence will be useful as a positive means of identification in connection with driving, but for other purposes as well."

Curtis To Seek Tisdalle Seat

slight preference for the latter.

The main reason for Curtis' decision, according to reliable sources, is that he feels Saanich-Islands is the seat where he has the best chance of winning and therefore of helping his party.

But it won't all be smooth sailing because the riding excludes much of urban Saanich, where Curtis has gained much of his support over the years as mayor, and includes the Gulf Islands where some of his policies as chairman of the Capital Regional Board are unpopular.

Anderson favors Saanich-Islands despite a similar problem — resulting from his support for a proposal to create a national park in the Gulf Islands — largely because the Liberals in Victoria city in 1969 trailed the victorious Socreds by approximately 10,000 votes, a large margin to make up this time.

The Liberal leader is reported to have given up any thought of running in Esquimalt against Socred incumbent Herb Bruch. In that riding in 1969 the Liberals also ran a poor third.

Former Socred Dr. Scott Wallace, now a Tory, is seeking re-election in Oak Bay where past B.C. Liberal president Mel Couvelier is running. The Socreds haven't nominated in the riding so far.

Saanich and the Islands NDP members chose Eric Sherwood of 1968 McTavish, Saanichton, as that party's candidate in a nomination meeting last February. Sherwood, an electronics repair service owner, made an unsuccessful bid in December for a seat on North Saanich council.

Curtis, 39, of 3936 Shorncliffe, was first elected Saanich councillor in December, 1961, and re-elected in 1963. He was elected reeve in 1964 and re-elected in 1965, 1967, 1969 and 1971. The title of reeve was changed to mayor in 1968.

He has been chairman of the Capital Regional Board in 1966, 1967, 1968, again in 1970 and 1971 and was re-elected to that post again this year.

He has been chairma of the Union of B.C. Municipalities and is chairman of the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C.

He is a native of Victoria, is married and has three children.

Zeal in Ethics

BEEFS AND BOUQUETS . . .

Let me clear my craw first, and I hope Health Minister Ralph Loffmark is within earshot.

Concerns an elderly lady who was confined to a private hospital. She was having severe back pains, but x-rays showed nothing. However, her son decided to call in a chiropractor in an effort to ease the problem. Chiropractor came, administered and the back pain was cleared by a very significant amount.

Then, her doctor, who had been her doctor for many, many years, wrote a letter to her, noting that she had received chiropractic treatment and as a result, he could no longer be responsible for her health and would she make arrangements for another doctor.

We constantly hear about medical ethics, and there are no doubt many who guard these ethics zealously. But in this instance, it would seem to me that pique took over from ethics. It would be a sorry note if all doctors took this attitude and, I might add, cause a rather hectic game of musical chairs inasmuch as hundreds of chiropractic users would be looking for new doctors.

The medic in question could offer his elderly patient no relief for a back problem. The chiropractor did give that relief, but is this any reason for the medic to wash his hands of her whole medical case?

Autocratic . . .

OUR POLICE forces are rarely in receipt of public praise. They too often suffer the quiet humiliation of vituperation heaped on them from many quarters — much of the vituperation unwarranted.

Nice, then, to receive a letter from a Mrs. J.W. Shaw on Majestic Drive.

"A city police night sergeant came to my aid and beyond the call of duty on Monday, June 19. This gallant put me right at ease and made phone calls on my behalf. He also put his hand in his own pocket and on faith alone, helped me out of an embarrassing situation.

"He also did much more — he restored my faith in human nature. We are all indeed fortunate to be under the careful eye of the Victoria City Police and especially the night sergeant of June 19th."

That night sergeant, I find, was the veteran Nap Bouchard. I think he should know his kindness did not go unnoticed . . .

ANOTHER letter, this one from Betty Benton, written shortly after the death of her husband Frank. It too shows the helping hands offered by others.

The Bentons were fishing near Beechey Head when Frank Benton suffered a heart attack. His daughter took off for help at the Marina, but let Mrs. Benton tell the story.

"When she arrived at the Marina not a second was wasted. Mr. Brown in his rescue boat was off in a flash and they brought my husband back at top speed. There was a doctor waiting. Two of the men came in another boat to pick me up and I noticed they were soaked to the waist in their headlong rush to help.

"THE SOOKE volunteer ambulance arrived in less than 15 minutes and the two young men who manned it were superb. We came into town in record time but never once did the driver take a chance of causing an accident. Splendid, too, was the way other traffic gave way when they saw the ambulance.

"I can never repay or thank those people. I'll never know who they all were, but in spite of all the problems that surround us, the human spirit still draws from the well of compassion. God bless them every one."

TWO INSTANCES of help — help that was given with no thought of monetary gain, public praise or private thank you. These unfortunately, are the rare cases that come to light, but I assure you they are the rule rather than the exception.

Even in today's cynical world, thousands of people take the time to lend the hand of friendship and help. They practise what a lot of us preach, but too often fail to back with meaningful deeds.

the accused to be stopped by police.

If the talk to the lawyer means face-to-face, it could take a lawyer much more than two hours to be phoned, get dressed and get to the police station.

Gregory indicated Victoria police would make sure any person who might be a breath-analysis subject would get in touch with his lawyer but also would insist on a test if there was no contact within close to two hours.

The Victoria chief also wondered what would happen if a lawyer was called and advised his client not to take a test. Since the highest court's ruling did not put the breath analysis device in doubt — just Toronto police procedure — would that lawyer be counselling an offence?

Other chiefs agreed no definite change in procedure could be made before a directive or advice is sent from the provincial government.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said B.C. is in a better position than most provinces because B.C. still has the so-called roadside suspension legislation.

But he added that the province will have to abide by the court ruling.

Peterson said there is still the old type of evidence that can be used in impaired driving cases.

The real question raised by the ruling, he said, is how much it will delay the procedures used in applying breath analysis tests.

Peterson said, "We have to give very serious study to the new decision of the supreme court, as soon as we receive it, to determine how it will affect the procedures in the province."

place finish, and apportioned the balance among the other primary entries.

The primary had been waged as a winner-take-all contest for the entire 271-vote delegation. But Humphrey forces challenged that system — after their candidate lost — on the ground it violated party reform requirements.

McGovern said he still would win the nomination, but said he didn't know how many ballots it would take. He said he was determined to do it, "whether it takes one or one hundred."

Until Thursday, his forces had been working to pry loose the last bloc of votes to put together a majority before the convention.

McGovern said he was confident the convention would overturn the credentials committee decision. His challengers said they were confident it would be upheld.

"I couldn't possibly support a convention that would sustain this kind of shabby, backroom dealings," the enraged McGovern told reporters in a reception room just off the Senate floor. "I wouldn't have any part of any convention nominee who would support this."

The Associated Press count of delegate strength after the California decision showed McGovern with 1,216.9 of the 1,509 it will take to win nomination.

Humphrey had 497.05 votes, George Wallace of Alabama, 384, and Muskie, 230.05. There were 512.4 uncommitted delegates.

The Southerners continued to encounter moderate resistance in Thursday's second day of the operation. Government officers and senior U.S. advisers seemed optimistic.

One American said the counter-offensive was going better than anticipated. The North Vietnamese have had almost two months to consolidate their hold on South Vietnam's northernmost province, which they captured May 1.

More than 1,000 more South Vietnamese marines were committed to the drive Thursday in two combat assaults aboard U.S. helicopters.

With the fresh troops, government forces formed a rough east-southwest arc between six and 12 miles from Quang Tri City, the provincial capital.

The drive, code named Lam Son 72, began early Wednesday from the My Chanh River, 12 miles south of Quang Tri City and 20 miles north of the old imperial capital of Hue.

The passageways for the three-pronged advance were opened by what allied military sources called the greatest concentration of American firepower since the Korean war 20 years ago.

Thirteen U.S. Navy cruisers and destroyers shelled the eastern portion of Quang Tri province from their battle stations off the coast in the Gulf of Tonkin. Five aircraft carriers, the USS Oriskany arriving Wednesday as the latest addition, sent their planes to strafe and bomb communist positions in the province.

From bases in Guam and Thailand came B-52 stratofortresses, the U.S. Air Force's biggest bomber, plus wave after wave of smaller fighter-bombers to pound the province.

Meanwhile in Canberra, Australia, South Vietnamese Foreign Minister Tran Van Lam said he expected a peace in Indochina in "the next few months."

Lam was addressing the national press club Thursday after attending a ministerial meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization the previous day as an observer.

Referring to the war in Vietnam, he said: "Some light seems to be appearing at the end of the tunnel. I'm convinced we are going to have peace in the next few months."

Carbohydrates

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have received a lot of good advice from you. I'm a diabetic and am on a 2,000-calorie diet, and the doctor says I am fit as a fiddle.

What I want to know is the definition for carbohydrates. What are they? The dictionary just has something about animal growth that I can't define—E.R.

Let's see if we can take some of the mystery out of it.

By definition, carbohydrates are foods of a certain chemical make-up — a particular pattern of carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, and they are organic, meaning that they come from a life form of some kind. So I guess that hasn't added much to your understanding, but don't go away just yet.

There are three principal types of food that we eat:

- Protein.
- Fats.
- Carbohydrates.

(Plus, of course, incidental but necessary items including vitamins, minerals, and "trace elements" of which we need only traces.)

Protein contains the amino acids, or complicated chemical structures containing nitrogen, which have been well called "the building blocks of life." Essential, they are necessary to build, and rebuild, the cells of which the body is made up. Main sources of protein are lean meat, fish, eggs, cheese, poultry. There's some in milk. Some vegetables (nuts and soy beans, for example) are quite rich in protein, compared to other vegetable and fruit products that have little. Fats — well, you know what fats are. Fat in meat; vegetable oils; not much in fruit, although there are exceptions.

Now carbohydrates: for your purposes, consider them as being mainly various types of sugar (cane sugar, sugars in fruits, honey, etc.) and various starchy foods. Spaghetti, macaroni, white flour, corn starch are the main examples of foods that are almost entirely carbohydrates.

Carbohydrates don't "build cells."

Carbohydrates are the "fuel" of the body, giving us heat and energy, while protein "builds." (Some protein, however, is converted into carbohydrates in the body.)

Fats supply some needs that come from neither of the other groups, although fats, of which most of us eat too much, also supply energy. Fats are higher in calories than carbohydrates or protein.

Sugar is absorbed very rapidly. Starches, too. Fats, and especially proteins, are absorbed more slowly. But if you eat more carbohydrates than you need, the surplus will be stored in the body as fat. (Same is true of fats.)

Railway Hikes Pension Rates

MONTREAL (CP) — Increased pension payments to former Canadian National Railways employees or their widows were announced Thursday by N. J. MacMillan, chairman and president of the company. The changes, which will increase by four per cent any pension in effect on Dec. 31, 1970, and by two per cent any in effect Dec. 31, 1971, affect 32,000 persons now receiving payments from the CN pension fund.

Vote-Spending Bill Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Attempts to bring order into federal election spending failed Thursday when only eight of a possible 20 members of the Commons election committee appeared for a meeting which was to take a final crack at the promised expenses bill. Without the necessary quorum of 11, the committee gave up on the issue for this parliamentary session.

Breath Workab

CP, UPI

OTTAWA — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Thursday he sees no need yet for amendments to the breath test laws as a result of a Supreme Court of Canada judgment giving motorists the right to consult a lawyer before taking the tests.

"It seems to me to be a workable situation," he said.

The minister said the judgment didn't appear to define "the limits to which an accused can push a delay."

If the enforcement of the breath analysis law proved to be unworkable because of excessive delays, he said, the government might have to ask the court for some clarification.

Under the 1969 amendments to the Criminal Code cracking down on drinking drivers, the breath test must be taken within two hours of a motorist

OTTAWA (CP) — The proposed new baby bonus plan was delayed indefinitely Thursday night by strong opposition criticism in the Commons.

Gangs Pose Threat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Court was told this week that dangerous gangs of youths are slipping beyond police control in parts of the city.

Al Hoem, an assistant city prosecutor, said police are having serious problems with a group known as the Clark Park Gang. He also referred to the Riley Park Gang as serious troublemakers.

He made the comment while asking for a jail sentence for John Peter Bryce, 19, of Vancouver, who he said is a member of the Clark Park Gang.

Bryce was fined $150 and placed on six months probation after pleading guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting and swearing during an incident last Friday night in which beer bottles were thrown at police.

Probation terms prohibit Bryce from frequenting the Clark Park area and associating with 15 men and youths named by Hoemas members of the gang.

Court was told police who went to quell rowdy behavior of 40 to 50 youths drinking beer on a lawn were pelted with beer bottles and the area had to be cleared by force.

Hoem said further arrests of members of the same group were made after a B.C. Hydro bus driver was assaulted.

An 18-year-old youth and a 17-year-old girl were also fined for causing a disturbance and 14 other young men, women and youths were remanded on similar charges.

Breath Judgment Workable: Lang

CP, UPI

OTTAWA — Justice Minister Otto Lang said Thursday he sees no need yet for amendments to the breath test laws as a result of a Supreme Court of Canada judgment giving motorists the right to consult a lawyer before taking the tests.

"It seems to me to be a workable situation," he said.

The minister said the judgment didn't appear to define "the limits to which an accused can push a delay."

If the enforcement of the breath analysis law proved to be unworkable because of excessive delays, he said, the government might have to ask the court for some clarification.

Under the 1969 amendments to the Criminal Code cracking down on drinking drivers, the breath test must be taken within two hours of a motorist being asked by a policeman for a breath sample.

The 1969 law makes it an offence to have an alcohol level of .08 per cent or higher in the blood. It is also an offence not to take the breath test on request without reasonable excuse.

In its 6-to-3 decision Thursday, the court said Clarence Wayne Brownridge of Stayner, Ont., had a reasonable excuse when he refused to take the test until he has talked to his lawyer.

But in another judgment, the court rejected the appeal of George Clinton Duke of Oakville, Ont., who claimed he was deprived of a fair trial because police did not give him a sample of his breath.

The court said the section of the breath laws compelling police to give accused such samples was not proclaimed by Parliament.

Mr. Justice Roland Ritchie, writing the majority reasons for the court, said the refusal of police to allow Brownridge to consult his lawyer infringed the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights says an accused has the right to retain counsel without delay.

Ritchie added that as long as police are sure that the demand to consult a lawyer is not for reasons of delay "or for some other improper reason," the request should be granted.

Mr. Justice Bora Laskin said the right to retain and instruct counsel "can only have meaning . . . if it is taken as raising a correlative obligation upon the police authorities to facilitate contact with counsel."

"This means allowing him upon his request to use the telephone for that purpose if one is available. I am not concerned in this case with determining how many calls must be permitted."

He said that, in the case of Brownridge, his rights would have been sufficiently recognized if he had been permitted to telephone, reached his counsel and spoken to him.

"I would not construe the right . . . as entitling him (an accused) to insist on the personal attendance of his counsel if he can reach him by telephone," continued Laskin.

Ontario police chiefs took a dim view of the ruling, saying it could mean the end of the compulsory tests.

Chief Edward Tachirhart of Barrie, new president of the Ontario Association of Police Chiefs, said drivers already have their rights protected.

Chief Robert Cook of Sarnia said lawyers may stay away from the police station for two hours until the alcohol has worn off their client.

Baby Bonus Plan Summer Casualty

OTTAWA (CP) — The proposed new baby bonus plan was delayed indefinitely Thursday night by strong opposition criticism in the Commons.

Privy Council President Allan MacEachen called off debate on the bill containing the plan when it became apparent the Commons was not going to give it final passage after an all-day-debate, the 11th day of debate on the bill since March.

With Parliament hoping to recess for the summer today, it was not clear what would happen to the plan to cut off family allowances for better-off Canadians and give more to the needy who pass an annual means test.

The government bill had been subjected to concerted New Democratic attack because it abandoned the principle of universality of baby-bonus payments to all Canadian parents with childre.

The Conservative party objected to what members called the bureaucratic nightmare that would result as the government sought to confirm incomes of those seeking the payment.

It agreed with the idea that only the poor should receive the bulk of the payments but said the government should recover payments to the rich through income tax.

The Social Credit party agreed.

The bill could be resurrected again in the fall if the government recalls Parliament before an expected fall general election.

Moses' Course Expanding

LOST VALLEY, Israel — If Moses tried to cross the Red Sea today, he would have a longer journey than 3,500 years ago when, the Bible says, he led the Israelites out of Egypt.

Dr. Ari Ben-Menahem, head of the geophysical observatory sunk into solid granite rock in this remote desert canyon some 10 miles north of Israel's Red Sea port of Eilat, says he has confirmed a widely held theory about the drifting of the continents.

Ben-Menahem says the Sinai and Arabian peninsulas are gradually drifting away from Egypt and the African continent at a rate of about one-fifth of an inch a year.

So Moses would have had some 175 yards less to cover in his Biblical journey than he would have now.

Lessons on Hypocrisy

IN THE UNLIKELY EVENT of a military decision in Vietnam, it will be the people with the best weapons who will have proved that "might is right." At the moment United States air power is in the process of demonstrating new-found efficiency with laser and television bombing techniques that can come within five feet of the bull's eye. And, it will be recalled, it was Russian-made tanks and artillery that made possible the impressive successes of the North Vietnamese April-May offensive.

It is possibly significant that neither North nor South Vietnam has ever possessed an arms industry. Always it has been "friends" who have provided the means of waging war. China, the United States, the Soviet Union, France and lesser contributors must share the dreadful responsibility for the effects of all the years of conflict.

"Nobody," Canada's General Sir Arthur Currie is reported to have asserted, "can make war without weapons." He qualified his statement by adding "... with the possible exception of the Irish." It is true, of course, that a war can be fought with sticks and stones, but tanks, mortars, bombs and machine guns are more effective, more devastating and more lethal.

Col. Carl Miller, commanding the 8th Tactical Fighter Wing flying missions out of Thailand against North Vietnam, says the "smart" precision bombs now enable four aircraft to do the same amount of damage 100 could inflict using conventional equipment. He hopes it will be possible to destroy North Vietnam's war capability while holding civilian casualties to a minimum.

China and the Soviet Union will see to it that Col. Miller's optimistic prediction is defeated. The "war capability" doesn't rest with the Vietnamese in the terms Col. Miller employs, and that the real culprits in Indochina understand.

New depths of cynicism must have been reached by nations which can accept the victimization of the Vietnamese — and all of Indochina — and at the same time send their representatives to Stockholm to preach about the protection of the environment.

It will be interesting to see what the friends of Hanoi will do to sustain North Vietnam's war capability now that United States bombers are threatening it. All that the people in that horror-ridden part of the world can look forward to is another experiment in destructiveness on the way to ultimate extermination. And that may not be so very far away.

Just a Second

TIME IS AT HAND for the changing of time—nothing as crude as the switching back and forth from daylight to standard, but something highly sophisticated. It has to do with discovery that Earth is slowing down, although signs of this aren't showing very clearly to those who feel the pace is too quick.

But the slow-down is here, atomic clocks tell us, and before midnight strikes tonight they will tick an additional second to get things in kilter.

Clocks moved into the atomic age back in 1958, and while they still measure time on the age-old assumption that it takes precisely 24 hours for Earth to complete one rotation on its axis, they do it more accurately than the old time-pieces. An atomic clock moves to the tempo of the unvarying vibration of cesium atoms — almost 9.2 billion cycles per second, it is said. Through this lack of cesium off-beat the need for a one-second on-beat was found.

It's not so complicated, either, when compared to another time measurement — the calendar. The Gregorian, Jewish, Moslem and Chinese calendars all divide up the year in somewhat different ways. And now it is learned, through the Washington-based Editorial Research Reports service, that a bright spark of that city, by name of Walter Rothe, has come up with the Universal Calendar which has 13 months of 28 days each. The extra month is called Solarius, and calendar-confuser Rothe proposes to name the extra day occuring in leap years as Quadrennial Day, and to add yet another day to the calendar every 3,323 years. After persuading the entire world to adopt his calendar, Rothe plans to devise a universal religion.

Talk about Earth slowing down, it looks very much as though there are those who would stop it altogether.

Joined Hands Clammy

BRITAIN AND FRANCE aren't doing too well in their joint supersonic transport effort. Those aren't sound barrier booms, but hollow sounds in sales of the costly Concorde. Ever-increasing production costs have been a main problem. And the two countries are faced with the same situation in another get-together undertaking — the long-talked-about English Channel tunnel.

The most extensive studies ever have been under way on the economic as well as technical feasibility of the project. Up until now it was being confidently predicted that the governments of the two countries would be announcing an "all systems go" by next summer. But the "blast off" could very well be delayed indefinitely.

An official assessment from the studies is most discouraging from two standpoints:

First, it is now thought that the amount of traffic the tunnel would draw from cross-channel ferries would be substantially less than was estimated; and the "under-way" would yield an inadequate financial return in its early years of operation.

And second, capital costs including financing charges, have risen to $1.25 billion from $750 million two years ago and $400 million in 1963.

It would seem there are more "downs" than "ups" in Anglo-French togetherness.

OUR READERS' VIEWS

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest, and if signed with pen-names, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

Invasion Of Privacy

This communication ... concerns invasion of privacy in its most literal sense and you may agree with me that it is a situation which needs airing in the British Columbia press.

The facts of the chronicle are incredible and yet easy of confirmation by the simplest inquiry. It would be a really comic story if it were not such a tragic illustration of the immaturity of our legal fraternity.

It begins in 1970 when our provincial government, like other provincial governments, in an attempt to rectify an intolerable situation, brought in a revolutionary amendment to the Landlord and Tenant Act.

Probably because there was nobody outside of the Inner Temple in London, England, capable of composing the traditional gobble de goop language of statutory law, the several attorney general's departments simply cribbed from each other and presented to their legislative assemblies new laws governing the landlord and tenant relationship whose interpretation and intention were only vaguely understood.

The unhappy results of this ineptitude are now beginning to show themselves and a good example is seen in the section of the act governing privacy. Whatever body of legal pontiffs composed Section 46, in an attempt to inject some provincial individuality to its copy, produced a regulation capable of two diametrically opposite interpretations. One of these would permit the owner of rented premises to enter and show the dwelling to a prospective purchaser or new tenant at any reasonable time during the last month of the existing tenancy. The other interpretation forbids him doing so unless he either has an agreement to that effect or has given written notice of his intention and stated the time of entry.

At first sight this ambiguity may appear of little consequence but the implications to the real estate business are shattering!

An amusing sidelight to the problem is the attitude of the attorney general's department. On being questioned they will say that they have forgotten ... if they ever knew — what the real intention of the law was and that sometime in the future some judge in some British Columbia court will settle the matter one way or the other. they don't care which.

Meanwhile, if the subject becomes topical, as it may well do if one of the many front-door clashes explodes in to a police case, your cartoonist might depict a landlord with a crowbar and a tenant with a shotgun, both exuding righteous anger, facing each other across a front doorstep.

JOHN Y. WOODS,

Anchors Out

More and more frequently lately one gets the depressing feeling that what few Canadian business leaders we have are surrounded by pygmies, men with little minds and little legs forever scurrying to catch up, but never in front. Canadians might have hoped that our Canadian Manufacturers Association, our Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Independent Petroleum Association and our Canadian banks would have come out strongly in some positive way over the basic philosophy behind the screening act for foreign takeovers and then suggested how the act could be improved, in some constructive manner. Instead we get public hand-wringing, nit-picking and foot-dragging. These groups would do this country a service if they struck the word "Canadian" from their names. They give no visible sings whatsoever of any grasp of national aspirations. To them a country is merely a name, and if we get a new name, so what. We'll reincorporate with a new title. Doubtless the pygmies will scurry around again, anchors out in all directions, over the proposed Canadianization of boards of directors of Ontario companies, a bold and long overdue step, which hopefully will be extended nationally.

If these groups have any formulated policy for Canada as a nation let them say so, so we know where they stand. If not, they should refrain completely from commenting on national affairs, because a nation to them is simply a place to do business, not a home, a native land, a place to stand proud and free, as it is to me.

The Mails

We live in the land of luneybin, if you put the Post Office to the test. I asked the postmaster for information on the latest time of collections. The large boxes in the city, 2:30; but if you happen to know the location of a sub-post office it is then 4:30. After that the whole of Greater Victoria must mail at the General Post Office on Government Street up to 9 o'clock.

The locations of the 4:30 collections are not broadcast. "You have to ask for them," the official voice told me. I replied, "I am asking you now." The voice replied, "That is not enough; you have to put your request in writing and mail it to the postmaster."

Strikes in the Public Service

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

HOW do all these public service strikes grab you?

Strikes and threatened strikes by hydro power workers, by Quebec longshoremen tieing up wheat shipments, by garbagemen in several cities turning the streets into rotting piles of putrefaction, by air controllers and airport crews paralyzing transportation, and soon perhaps once more by mailmen.

In Parliament for nearly two years there have been warnings that public servants — and the name "servant" in the Commons is becoming a sour joke with many MPs — are pushing too hard and too far.

Among those with the power to call a halt to what many parliamentarians have bluntly termed "blackmail" of the taxpayers by their supposed "servants," has been Treasury Board President Charles M. Drury.

Keep it up, he warned the mailmen last time they struck, and Parliament, responding to the anger of the taxpaying public, might wipe out the right to strike.

He has all but threatened the public service unions that they could face a flat, unqualified outlawing of strikes in the "essential" sectors of the public service.

So what's "essential"?

Mail service? Rail and air transportation? Shipping pilots? National harbors?

A few of many, those, and all in the federal field.

And if the federal government moved to restore peace, order and commonsense into its own backyard of labor relations, wouldn't provincial and municipal governments be under pressure to set their own public services straight?

Strikes in the public service, always frowned on by federal civil servants as not quite decent, became respectable when the former Liberal prime minister, Lester Pearson, pushed through a law in Parliament assuring them it was quite acceptable for them to strike the taxpayers.

It didn't matter that federal civil servants had built-in job security so snug that their firing was virtually impossible, nor that they had pensions and fringe benefits the envy of most other sectors of the economy, nor even that across the board their pay was above the comparative national average for the type of work done.

Privileged or not, no matter; they could strike.

And some of them did, while others chose the binding arbitration route.

So more and more people of standing and authority are starting to sound like Treasury Board President Drury and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau who warned federal civil servants that there was cnly "so much juice" they could "squeeze" out of the taxpayer "lemon."

Those were his words, and if he thought the taxpayer was getting a bit on the sour side then about public service strikes, they've since become positively acid.

Listen to John P. Robarts, former premier of Ontario, now retired into private business and a taxpayer rather than a tax collector.

"I recall," he says, "in the early '60s we here in Ontario passed legislation removing from Ontario civil servants the right to strike" — legislation which also set up an impartial grievance procedure and provided for compulsory arbitration.

"At precisely the same time we were doing that in Ontario, the federal government of Canada and the provincial government of Quebec drafted legislation to give their civil servants the right to strike.

"All I can say is that if you give a man a new toy you must expect him to play with it.

"Public service strikes are now strikes against the taxpayer — they're not strikes against the employer, the government — they're devices to squeeze the public."

What makes it "blackmail," as so many in Parliament have termed public service strikes, is that the law of the open market place does not operate in the protected civil service sector of the economy.

That law says that if employees hold out for too much too long, the employer goes broke and both the company and jobs go down the drain.

Governments don't go broke — not in the ordinary sense — although inflation and excessive taxation is a form of bankruptcy.

For there's always more a strike-shy government can wring from the taxpayer to appease civil service greed. And so government employees, federal, provincial and municipal, are "bargaining," as it's laughingly called, against a bottomless public purse constantly refilled by helpless taxpayers under the pressure of faint-hearted, weak and venal administrations.

Washington Calling

War Could Be Big Issue

By MARQUIS CHILDS

BY WAY of Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker in Saigon, South Vietnam's President Ngyen Van Thieu sent a warning the other day that the decision makers here in Washington can hardly ignore. Thieu said that the chance of a new North Vietnamese offensive in October could not be written off.

Coming at the climax of the presidential campaign it could make the Vietnam war a principal issue. It would shatter the comfortable conviction of Republican strategists that, with Vietnamization and the effectiveness of surgical, push-button bombing, the war can be ruled out of the campaign. In the posture of hard-headed realist, Hubert Humphrey is also convinced that President Nixon is invulnerable on the war and on foreign policy in general.

Having been derided as a one-issue candidate, George McGovern could in the event of a new offensive from the north challenge the president's claim to end the war and bring peace to Indochina. Under the circumstances, with the cost of the air and naval war escalating in new billions of dollars, this could be a vital issue once again.

Every effort will be made by the Nixon administration to see that this does not happen. With a flurry of rumors coinciding with Henry Kissinger's latest visit to Peking the goal is a negotiated settlement, or as a minimum before November a ceasefire and an exchange of prisoners.

But those who should know within the government here see nothing in progress looking to serious negotiation. Recent remarks by China's Premier Chou En-lai indicate his belief that the war will go on and surely be a factor in the American election. He was reported as asking visiting Americans about McGovern's chances in November.

Despite the mining of the harbors and the bombing of rail lines close to the Chinese border, China and the Soviet Union have it in their power to fuel a new offensive. For the current offensive the Soviets supplied advanced weapons, including the Strela missile. The Russians have, however, withheld certain far-out rarities in their arsenal.

One is the mysterious Styx surface-to-surface missile, with a reported range of at least 14 miles. Weaponeers in the Pentagon know little about the Styx other than its reputed immense destructive power. They would give a lot to get their hands on a Styx so it could be broken down and analyzed. That may be one reason the Russians have kept it out of Vietnam.

The administration drive, coupled with the ingenuity and the diplomatic finesse of Kissinger, cannot be dismissed in keeping the war off the political stage. The scenario for next month offers some extremely interesting possibilities.

The Democrats will be meeting in Miami Beach and their platform is likely to put the war high up on the issue list. Former Secretary of Defence Clark M. Clifford, testifying before the Democratic platform committee, said it would be the "cardinal issue." The president and Kissinger will be in San Clemente, and taking the headlines away from Miami Beach will have priority. What better way than to announce a new step toward a negotiated settlement of the war?

As a pawn in the presidential campaign the Vietnam war blacks out the horrors of the past three months — the dead, the maimed, the starving, those horribly burned with napalm, the thousands of new refugees herded into hastily improvised camps. These are Vietnamese, added victims of the surgical war that has ravaged not less than one-third of the entire population of Vietnam.

The conscience of America may be so numbed by years of this unending war that these nameless victims, these small yellow people who stand defenceless under the rain of bombs from the B-52s, can no longer stir any chord of compassion or indignation. And yet who can ever forget that news photo of children fleeing with terror and pain on their faces from the napalm attack that, by a mistake on the part of South Vietnamese pilots, fell on a civilian refugee centre? We supply the napalm. We supply the planes. We pay the pilots. The accidents of war, yes, but will anyone be able to tell that girl of 11 or 12 who had ripped off her clothes in her agony why it happened?

The president has always had the option of hardening American opinion behind a "support your president in a war", majority. That is apparently what is happening. But if the American conscience, the last best hope of earth, is a casualty then the price is very high.

From there, he controls International Armaments Corporation in the U.S., with main offices and warehouses in Alexandria, Va., and a staff of about 40; and Interarms U.K. in Britain, with a staff of 100, and warehouses in Manchester and Acton, London.

Cummings, who comes from Philadelphia, began his present career after his Second World War army service by buying up captured German helmets and reselling them at a profit. Since 1953 he has been registered with the U.S. government as a licensed arms dealer.

Essentially, Interarms' work is to buy up surplus military arms and resell them, either as sport weapons — after "sporterizing" or converting them — or to other governments.

The sale to other governments has included everything from surplus iniforms to heavy tanks and jet combat planes. It is shrouded in secrecy because, says Cummings, "our clients prefer not to have publicity, and governments keep the figures classified anyway."

Cummings says Interarms' turnover is "top secret" too, but adds that "while we have been aiming for $100 million yearly, it is still in eight figures only, not nine."

Cummings has taken legal proceedings against some who called him a "trafficker."

That, "by European definition," he says, "is someone who does not pay any attention to the law ... We are buyers and sellers under American and British government licenses; we have only those depots physically in England and America, and every transaction is made only with the proper official approval by all governments concerned."

Clients of Interarms are found on every continent. Its Middle East business is so sensitive that even the names of its Mideast agents are kept secret.

Under the U.S. Gun Control Act of 1968, Interarms and other traders cannot import even "sporterized" ex-military guns into the United States. This has vastly helped U.S. gun manufacturers. Before 1968, Interarms, says Cummings, sold more big-bore rifles (of 30-30 or hunting calibre) than all U.S. makers put together.

Elsewhere in the world, Interarms buys as much surplus as it can and sends it to England, where it is "sporterized." This usually consists of shortening the stock, or of eliminating a bayonet lug and putting on a target sight. The converted guns are then sold throughout the British Commonwealth.

France prefers not to work with private dealers, though Interarms' Paris representative, Jacques Perles, does make a few transactions.

"France," says Cummings, "prefers to push new production almost exclusively as an industry base for themselves. They're not so much interested in surplus."

Back in 1965, Interarms' West German representative bought no less than 74 surplus West German Air Force F-86 Sabre Jets and resold them at a huge profit to Venezuela. Similar deals for Sabres, ostensibly for Iran but which ended up in Pakistan, caused major outcries in Bonn.

As a result of this, and of gunrunning by others to Biafra, last December's strict new legislation virtually ended private West German sales, even surplus.

Private Arms Merchants Do Roaring Trade

One of a Series

'Whole Business Is Based on Human Folly and Is Self-Perpetuating'

By JOHN K. COOLEY, from London

Last month's Soviet-American treaty is viewed by many people and governments as a giant stride toward disarmament. It has not, however, bothered the private arms traders. Quite the contrary.

Samuel Cummings, the 44-year-old American who heads Interarms — by far the world's largest private buyer and seller of arms — points out: "We don't worry about the S.A.L.T. agreement because it will have no effect whatsoever on the movement of conventional arms, the arms we deal in.

"If anything, I would venture a modest prediction that it will cause an increase in conventional arms movements in the world, not only by private firms and producers, but also by governments. The inevitable result of denying or limiting strategic arms, the balance-of-power arms, is a greater movement of the conventional types. Anyhow, our business isn't controlled by us. It's controlled by the big powers who give the licensing.

"We are merely, in my view, a reflection for better or for worse of the times in which we live . . . The whole arms business . . . is essentially based on human folly and as such is self-perpetuating. It increases in direct proportion to human folly as the world's population increases. It's a sad commentary, and I don't make it in any hypocritical sense but strictly in a brutally realistic and, from our side, commercial sense."

Cummings spoke in a telephone interview from his residence in Monaco. From there, he controls International Armaments Corporation in the U.S., with main offices and warehouses in Alexandria, Va., and a staff of about 40; and Interarms U.K. in Britain, with a staff of 100, and warehouses in Manchester and Acton, London.

Clients of Interarms are found on every continent. Its Middle East business is so sensitive that even the names of its Mideast agents are kept secret.

Under the U.S. Gun Control Act of 1968, Interarms and other traders cannot import even "sporterized" ex-military guns into the United States. This has vastly helped U.S. gun manufacturers. Before 1968, Interarms, says Cummings, sold more big-bore rifles (of 30-30 or hunting calibre) than all U.S. makers put together.

Elsewhere in the world, Interarms buys as much surplus as it can and sends it to England, where it is "sporterized." This usually consists of shortening the stock, or of eliminating a bayonet lug and putting on a target sight. The converted guns are then sold throughout the British Commonwealth.

"France," says Cummings, "prefers to push new production almost exclusively as an industry base for themselves. They're not so much interested in surplus."

As a result of this, and of gunrunning by others to Biafra, last December's strict new legislation virtually ended private West German sales, even surplus.

Cummings says he has refused transactions only when he had reason to believe they would harm the United States.

Like his main competitor, Parker-Hale, Ltd., of Birmingham, England (which is nevertheless far, far behind Interarms, says Cummings), he cannot sell to Soviet or Chinese bloc countries because of U.S. and British government restrictions.

But both firms do buy large amounts in the East, especially from Omnipol of Czechoslovakia.

"We can sell only where government licenses permit . . . but if I could be told tomorrow in Washington that the Russians now need a new series of American weapons and we have no objection to your selling them now, then I would sell, if I could."

China's arms exports have been solely through the Chinese defence ministry. Neither Interarms nor any other private trader appears to have worked with them as yet.

However, Cummings recalls that Interarms bought in Indonesia some American arms that the Chinese had captured in Korea from the United States during the Korean war. China had sold them to the Indonesians, who in turn resold them to Interarms.

Some runners-up in the private trade include Cogswell and Harrison, with a retail sales outlet in Piccadilly, London. In the past they have had sales agreements with Belgium's big Fabrique Nationale and Vickers. Like Cummings, they have bought surplus from the Crown Agents, the government outlet.

At Bexleyheath, south of London, is the firm of Intor, Ltd., run by Maj. William Leslie who specializes in supplying Arab rulers of the Persian Gulf emirates.

Though Samuel Cummings appears virtually without important competitors in the United States, a few Canadians compete with him on their home ground.

International Firearms of Montreal, according to George Thayer, in his 1969 book, The War Business had U.S. subsidiaries in Vermont, had the firm of Federal Arms in Florida, and outbid Interarms on some pre-1968 Latin American imports, causing a shake-up in Interarms' management.

Levy Bros. in Toronto specializes in military vehicles now, but has dealt in several other weapons lines in the past.

Most picturesque of the private international traders is "Colonel" Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, an ex-pilot known as the "Black Eagle" or the "Black Eagle of Harlem." His dad in 1898.

It has included trying to build and train an air force in Ethiopia, then crashing a royal plane two days before Emperor Haile Selassies coronation; challenging Adolph Hitler's air force commander, Hermann Goering, to a dogfight in 1940, and acting as roving "ambassador at large" for the late Moise Tshombe of the Congo.

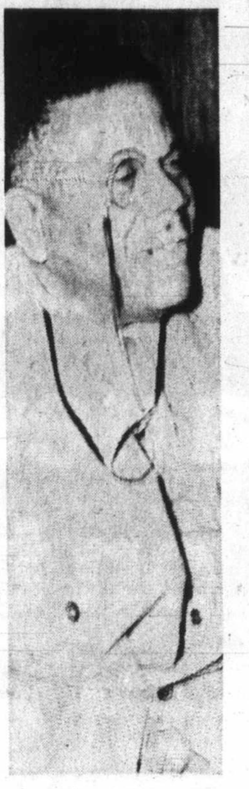
Julian, who talks breezily and sports a monocle, operates a U.S.-registered arms supply firm called Black Eagle International Associates. He describes it as "a small company worth only $15 million."

He visited Beirut on business recently and told a reporter of the Beirut Daily Star, "The best markets are in Latin America, and, after that, Africa. But we don't sell arms to any rebels, revolutionaries, or guerrillas . . . because it would cook my licence with the U.S. authorities.

"The profit is relatively small, and besides I think it is immoral. The weapons we sell are used only for defence."

As a black man himself, does he sell weapons to "black power" partisans in the United States? No, because this would be "asinine and senseless . . . Black Eagle International never sells domestically. We only export . . . (besides) those black people think they have power but are talking a lot of nonsense."

Julian says Sidney Poitier will soon star in a film about him. Although he is reputed to have been a millionaire since the age of 60, he says:



One of most picturesque international arms traders is "Colonel" Hubert Fauntleroy Julian — the "Black Eagle of Harlem" — who owns U.S.-registered arms-supply firm.

"It's disgraceful to think that munitions dealers can be millionaires. When you think of all those unheralded scientists working to cure diseases, earning a pittance, it's disgraceful. It's a crime that we spend so much money on arms."

If one moves out of the domain of the licensed traders and murky realm of what is usually called gunrunning evasion of licence controls — one finds it flourishing throughout the world.

On Sept. 24, 1971, Irish Republican Army (IRA) arms buyer David O'Connell (he prefers the Irish spelling, Daithi O Connail) left Dublin in the company of Maria McGuire, a multilingual former English literature student at University College, Dublin.

O'Connell had orders from the IRA Provisional Council to locate and purchase, with about $250,000, new stocks of arms for the IRA's guerrilla operations in Northern Ireland.

In July he had already visited a few of the better-known licensed dealers and also a few of the fly-by-night brokers. Apparently, Czechoslovakia's Omnipol looked like the best prospect.

"For the benefit of a new philosophy of Ireland," he later told a Times of London reporter, "the Irish people will do business across any boundary and any ideology." The money for his shopping trip, he added, had been raised in Ireland and America "by every method, short of robbing banks."

An official British government report, however, mentions multiplying raids on banks, post offices, and jewelry shops in both southern and northern Ireland. "The greater part of the proceeds do eventually get into IRA hands . . . a small amount compared with the financial support from foreign countries."

The main "foreign country" is the U.S., and the principal group raising money last year was the Irish Northern Aid Committee with its main office at the Bronx, N.Y., and claiming 80 branches in the U.S. and about 80,000 members.

Another group, the National Association for Irish Freedom, held a rally in New York City early this year at which its backers openly asked for "arms for the IRA."

During his shopping tour, O'Connell said he usually paid 25 per cent of the price in cash as down payment and balance on delivery.

"Operation Patriot," as the IRA called it, became an involved deal. It depended on a DC-6 cargo plane owned by a charter firm in Miami. The plane had ferried supplies to Biafra during the Nigerian civil war. Its call sign was Charlie Tango Kilo, and its registered owner was an American, Chalmers Goodlin.

Goodlin registered several planes in Ireland during the Biafra operation. And arms dealers believe that all or some of O'Connell's purchases may have been ordered originally for Biafra in Prague and never delivered.

On Oct. 16, 1971, Charlie Tango Kilo picked up the IRA arms consignment in Prague and flew to Schipol airport, Amsterdam. The cargo was consigned to a "Mr. Goodman" who apparently never existed, care of an Amsterdam hotel.

When the plane landed, heavily armed Dutch police, tipped off by British intelligence who had almost certainly penetrated the gunrunning network somewhere, were waiting. They detained everyone aboard and unloaded four tons of automatic weapons, rocket launchers, rockets, hand grenades, and ammunition all brand new.

One of the passengers was "U.S. businessman" Ernest Koenig, who spoke better German than English, and who had helped Biafra — selling it four West German air force surplus DC-3s from an American aircraft broker. He told the Dutch police he believed the cargo was to have been trans-shipped "elsewhere" on a Belgian Sabena flight.

Gunrunning like this represents only a fraction of the perhaps $200 million annual private trade in arms, and only, of course, an infinitesimal fraction of the multi-billion-dollar arms trade carried on by the big governments. But it is a major headache for governments just the same.

And in the case of some wars, like that in Biafra, it has played a definite role in keeping the bloodshed high and the war lasting longer than it might have otherwise.

According to Swiss and other European police sources, major centres of the European gunrunning trade are Berne, Zurich, Hamburg, Munich, and Milan.

Shipments not caught by customs (West German customs is especially severe in checking) leave the ports of Hamburg Antwerp, Marseilles, Barcelona, Rotterdam, Genoa ad Naples. As often as not they end up in Beirut' Jedda, or Dar es Salaam under a variety of bills of lading, such as "engine parts" or "pumps."

Many guns are run from the U.S. to Mexico: A secondhand rifle selling for $20 in the United States may fetch $150 south of the border. A Munich gun dealer showed this reporter a Saarland pistol selling for $25 about which he said, "You can get $125 for this in Turkey."

A big difficulty in catching gunrunners is they are often protected or covered by government agencies using them for clandestine operations.

The American CIA; France's espionage service, the SDECE; mercenary organizations winked at by British government in places like Yemen; West Germany's intelligence service, the BND; to say nothing of the Soviet KGB are only a few of those accused of using gunrunners or running guns themselves.

In 1965-66, a U.S. firm, Aero Associates, acquired 10 surplus B-26 bombers and contracted to fly them to Portugal for use in crushing the Angolan nationalist rebellion.

A pilot named John Richard Hawke delivered one plane to the Azores, but then flew one too low over the White House security zone in Washington and was arrested in Miami.

A Buffalo, N.Y. court acquitted Hawke and all his associates of violating the Export Control and Neutrality Act, even though they had been breaking it, according to the case brought on behalf of the state department; the CIA was covering the flight.

Between 1949 and 1961, the CIA, using the charter firm Air America still operating today in Southeast Asia, contrived to make massive air drops to Chinese Nationalist forces then operating in Thailand and Laos.

The CIA had done the same thing in mainland china in the early 1950s: two CIA men captured by the Chinese were given long prison sentences, though the U.S. government protested their innocence and called them "civilian employees of the department of the army" at the time.

One of them was released during preliminaries for President Nixon's Peking trip this year, while the other is apparently still in a Chinese jail.

Human ingenuity knows no bounds when it comes to the smuggling of arms, like narcotics.

A nitroglycerine explosive called "Nobel's Explosive 1449," used in recent IRA bombs, was exported from England to an Irish Republic quarry just a few miles south of the Ulster border.

Imports of guns, ammunition, and explosives move into Ulster hidden in trucks, double trunks of cars, false door panels, various nooks and crannies in Dublin-Belfast trains, and small boats.

Up in the northern mountains of Pakistan, the haughty Pathan tribesmen have been gunrunners from time immemorial.

Today, Pakistan President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto worries about new variations on an old tradition: the home manufacture of guns. These go to partisans of several tribes and to political groups that want to break away from Pakistan and found a new Pathan state.

There are persistent but uncheckable reports in Beirut of a group of Syrian and Lebanese traders in Abidjan, capital of the Ivory Coast, who buy surplus NATO arms from Europe and trans-ship them to Arab states of the Middle East.

Late last year, radical army officers in Bolivia charged that top political figures were involved in similar arms-transit business with Israel.

Judging by the past and present, the weapons merchants and their trade has become inseparable, as Samuel Cummings says, from "human folly." But easing the effects of that folly is the concern of those who seek ways to control the trade in conventional arms.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 19-year-old Powell River youth who pleaded guilty Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to a Colwood RCMP charge of escaping from William Head said he did so because of "a conflict between one of the guards and myself."

Harvey Paul Bob, who was transferred only last week to the minimum-security institution in the Metchosin area from the B.C. penitentiary at New Westminster, told Judge William Ostler:

"I figured he (the guard) took it for granted that, because I was a new inmate — fish, they call them — he could exercise his power of authority over me. He was just using me. I didn't go for that. We had an exchange of words."

Because of that exchange, said Bob, "I figured I was going back to the pen anyway," so he left William Head shortly after midnight Tuesday.

He was recaptured at about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday in bushland about five minutes from the institution after he was seen by one of the guards out on search duty.

A Colwood RCMP officer testified Bob was serving a total of three years and four months for two 1971 break-ins at Vancouver and a breach of probation and was due for release in February, 1974.

He read a record that showed five criminal convictions and three probation matters since Jan. 26, 1970.

Ostler sentenced Bob to eight months in penitentiary, a term that will be added to those the youth already is serving.

Lyle Bradley Quock, 26, of 132 Dallas, was sentenced by Ostler to three months in jail followed by a two-year probationary term.

Quock pleaded guilty June 20 to a Victoria charge of breaking into and entering a guitar studio at 2508 Douglas earlier that day and theft of three guitars worth a total of $288.50.

Ostler noted Quock had been sentenced in 1966 to five years for robbery with violence but had been paroled in 1968 and completed the parole without any further trouble.

He said the charge merited a severe penalty but a lenient term would be imposed because Quock had been "doing pretty well" and had been drinking when he took the guitars.

David Campbell Bowen, 25, of 10279 Tsaykum in Central Saanich, was fined a total of $300, put on probation for two years and ordered to repay $149.55 to The Bay. Bowen pleaded guilty June 16 to two Victoria charges containing four counts of uttering and to counts of fraud. They resulted from four cheques cashed in May and June at The Bay for a total of $95 plus two uses of a credit card to obtain goods worth $54.55.

Michael Alexander Jones, 21, of 1286 Pembroke, was fined $300 following his plea of guilty June 22 to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $50 — the shoplifting June 19 at Woolco of a $17.95 pair of men's pants.

In the court section of Judge E. F. N. Robinson, a two-month jail term was ordered for Jack Stewart Brown, 22, of 1476 Gladstone. He pleaded guilty June 17 to a charge of possession of MDA — one capsule found earlier that day when police checked him at a Victoria address.

In traffic court, two persons pleaded guilty to separate charges of impaired driving. Alexander Scott Kent, 21, of 171 Estelline, stopped June 3 in Saanich, was fined $400 while Karamjit Singh Lalli, 25, of 15 Lurline, stopped March 31 in the Colwood area, was fined $350.

Shelford Told 'Take It Easy'

Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Wednesday his doctor has ordered him to take a rest, mainly because of injuries he suffered during an anti-cabinet demonstration by trade unionists in New Westminster last month.

"I will be cutting down my activities and taking it easy," Shelford said. "I have informed the premier that my doctor has told me in no uncertain terms that I am to take a rest."

Shelford said his doctor has suggested physiotherapy to aid in his recuperation with a badly bruised arm and shoulder, injured when hit by a two-by-four during the disturbance.

However, he will still attend the conference of provincial agriculture ministers to be held at Halifax in late July.

He said most of his rest period will be spent in his riding of Omineca, and at the Lakelse Hot Springs resort near Terrace.

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA

The British Columbia Prescription Drug Subsidy Plan, administered by the British Columbia Department of Health Services and Hospital Insurance, is effective on Saturday, July 1, 1972.

Plan gives further help for those in need
The Plan is designed to permit the Government of British Columbia to pay for part of the cost of prescription drugs, for people of limited means who qualify for a 90 percent government subsidy of their medical care premiums.

Identity cards have now been issued
All those who qualify, and who have applied for registration under the overall Medical Services Plan of British Columbia should have already received their identity cards, which are valid to June 30, 1973.
If you hold such a card, it is important that you present it to the pharmacist of your choice, when buying a prescription.

How this plan works
The Government of British Columbia will pay half the cost of each qualifying prescription over $2.00. For example, if a prescription costs $3.00, you will pay $2.50 to the pharmacist, and the Government will pay him the remaining 50 cents. If a prescription costs $10.00, you will pay $6.00 to the pharmacist, and the Government will pay him the remaining $4.00.
Please note that the card may only be used for the benefit of the person(s) named on the card.

Your own pharmacist is cooperating and can answer questions
The Professional Pharmacists' Society has cooperated with the Government in the preparation of this plan. Your pharmacist has details on the plan and will be pleased to answer any questions you may have.

Swinging Golfer Tees Off At 103

Thompson
. . . no weekends

Arthur Thompson, 3375 Cadboro Bay, has been a member of the Uplands course since 1932 and plays regularly during the week.

But, according to a member of his family, he never plays on the weekends because he does not think it is fair for retired men to play on the only free days businessmen have.

A Montreal native, he came to Victoria in 1932 after spending 47 years with various branches of the Bank of Montreal.

A member of the family said Thursday that Thompson was not available for comment about his birthday because he was playing golf and afterwards he would be attending a party at the club.

Race in Fall

LONDON (Reuter) — A new round-the-world yacht race covering a course of nearly 28,000 miles will start from Portsmouth, England, in September. The race is organized by the Royal Naval Sailing Association and sponsored by Whitbreads Brewery, one of the biggest beer makers in Britain.

Ex-Partridge House To Serve as Centre

University House will be the new name of the modern house on the University of Victoria grounds which was originally designed to serve as the university president's residence.

Current UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquhar Thursday said the building is expected to develop into a university centre for special functions such as receptions, special seminars and small group meetings.

The house may also be used to provide temporary housing for special guests of the university.

The house has been vacant since the departure of former president Bruce Partridge in February. Partridge was the only president ever to live in the house which was built by the university about the time he arrived from Baltimore in 1969.

When Farquhar was appointed president, he already had his own house in Victoria, so did not wish to move into the university building.

Farquhar said the house was built originally "because it was felt a university should be able to provide accommodation for its presidents on the campus."

Total cost of the 5,000-square-foot building on Haro Road has been estimated as high as $135,000 including architects' fees and furnishings.

For the next 30 days these Dodge Boys will sell you a new car on their profit sharing plan.

Here's why.

It's simple. The factory said, "Boys, you've had a great volume year, so here's a bonus". Now what this means is that for every new car we sell, we're ready to share this bonus with you. And that means we can sell to you for a lot less.

C'mon in and see and test drive the '72 Dodge of your choice, Colt, Dart, Challenger, Charger, Coronet, Polara and the luxurious Monaco. Whatever your choice, there'll never be a better time to buy, because of the profit sharing plan.

To sweeten the deal even more, be sure to ask about the 'No Extra Cost' option packages on specially equipped models.

Six Unions Want Single Pact

Building Group Dissolving—Schibli

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

The Construction Labor Relations Association — official arm of 840 B.C. contractors in the construction industry dispute — is disintegrating now and will break up completely if it doesn't come to terms with six holdout unions.

This was the forecast Thursday of John Schibli, president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and secretary of the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council.

Schibli said an increasing number of CLRA contractors are ignoring the policy of their organization and signing interim agreements with his union and the others.

"The six unions in this pact will only agree to one settlement and we want to sit down across the table with the CLRA people representing the six trades. That is the only way we will settle," he said.

"Unless they (CLRA) act on that fairly quickly we'll bypass them and CLRA will head for complete disintegration. With the contracts we're signing now, they're already disintegrating."

Chuck Connaghan, CLRA president, has accused the holdout unions of playing politics. He maintains they are more interested in defeating Premier Bennett's Social Credit government than winning settlements for their members.

Politics do enter the picture in the refusal of thousands of construction unionists to obey a government back-to-work order.

The target of the unions is a piece of legislation hated by labor — the B.C. Mediation Commission Act (Bill 33).

It was under Section 18 of this act that the provincial cabinet ordered an end June 14 to a strike-lockout that was in full force by April 28. The act, with its power to enforce compulsory arbitration, came into being in 1968 and has been strongly opposed since by labor.

"There comes a time when you have to take a stand against this compulsion," said Schibli. "Last time around (the lockout of 1970) we refused to go back without new contracts but then we agreed to another means that allowed the men to go back while agreements were worked out.

"This time there won't be giving in."

If labor is to make a case against the effectiveness of Bill 33 it has to rally its forces.

A move in this direction had its beginning Wednesday night when a rally of the holdout unions attracted a crowd of 1,800 to the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver. A simiar rally is scheduled for Victoria's Quadra Street Union Centre at 8 p.m. next Wednesday.

Such rallies are meant to show a tightening of bonds with the 151,000 member B.C. Federation of Labor and the over-all organization for labor in Canada, the Canadian Labor Congress.

It is also known that the federation has tentative plans for a special conference to deal with the whole issue about the middle of July.

Much depends on what happens in the meantime but the timing is interesting. It would come right after the initial court appearance of unions charged under the Mediation Act. The first appearance has been set for July 13.

Charges were laid against four Vancouver area union locals following raids by the RCMP on 52 union offices across the province. The attorney-general's department was seeking evidence that the rank-and-file were being instructed to defy the back-to-work order.

The government plans appeared to have run into a snag Wednesday when Mr. Justice Peter Seaton of the B.C. Supreme Court quashed the search warrants used in raids at the offices of two unions — the plumbers and electricians.

But Attorney-General Leslie Peterson filed notice of appeal Thursday against the judge's ruling. The judge had declared there was not enough information on which to issue the warrants. He ordered return of documents taken in the raids.

There were 18 unions and 44 contracts originally involved in the construction dispute. Twelve unions have settled.

The six-union common front still holding out includes the carpenters, electricians, plumbers, boilermakers, cement masons and heat and frost insulators.

A $196,368 addition to the optical shop of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain, was announced Thursday from Ottawa by Public Works Minister J. E. Dube.

The contract was awarded to Herb Bate Ltd. of Victoria who submitted the lowest of six tenders. The addition calls for a one-storey building to house expanded facilities of the observatory.

Francis Williams, a Victoria silver carver, has been awarded $200 from the Mungo Martin Memorial Awards Fund to pursue his skills in the Haida Indian arts.

Ardythe Cooper of Milne's Landing, a University of Victoria student, received a similar award to continue her studies in anthropology and linguistics.

The awards are made possible through the B.C. Indian Arts Society and are given in memory of Martin, the late Kwakiutl chief, artist, philosopher and carver.

A youth hostel is being established in the Emily Carr hall on the campus of University of Victoria.

The hostel will operate between Monday and Aug. 18 and provide accommodation for 25 men and 25 women. Rates will be nominal and meals will be available.

Technicality

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market managed to minimize its losses for the session, staging a technical rally in late trading. Volume was moderate.

It was the sixth straight session the Dow Jones industrial average closed lower. The slump was attributed by most analysts to investor uncertainty about international monetary conditions after Britain's decision to float the pound.

Four Sectors

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were down in the four major sectors in light trading. Rapid Data was up ⅝ to $24⅞ and Logistec 1 to $11. Grafton was off 1½ to $28½, Credit Foncier 1¼ to $71¾, Falconbridge Nickel ⅞ to $65⅛, Noranda ¾ to $37, Du Pont ⅝ to $27⅞ and Nordair ⅝ to $6.

Oil Running Out?

Report Shakes Kuwait

BEIRUT (UPI) — With an oil revenue of some $800 million a year — enough to give $1,000 to each of its 733,000 citizens — Kuwait is the second richest country in the world.

Its citizens receive cradle-to-gravel welfare such as free education, medical care and housing loans. The state pays for children's textbooks, transport to school, even clothing and shoes. There are no telephone coin boxes because the service is free to all.

Automobiles are mostly huge American models, often junked after a year's service. The average working day for most Kuwaitis is rarely more than couple of hours.

All of this stems from Kuwait's vast oil wealth. It is the world's fifth biggest crude oil exporter. So when two deputies claimed in parliament recently that the country would run out of oil within only 16 years, the tiny city state was hit by a minor panic.

The deputies claimed the real figure for reserves was 24 billion barrels and not 67 billion as the government stated.

In a closed session of parliament, government ministers reportedly assured members there was, in fact, enough oil to last until the year 2026.

Nevertheless, oil sources say, orders went out to the Kuwait Oil Company (KOC) to limit production during 1972 to last year's figure of just under 3 million barrels a day. As a result, KOC decided to cancel plans for new terminal facilities to increase exports.

Further, the government presented a draft bill to parliament to allocate 12.5 per cent of oil revenues to a reserve fund — expected to reach $8 billion in the next 25 years — which could only be used when all oil reserves have been used.

An indicator of the government's uneasiness was its decision to commission a firm of U.S. engineering consultants to make an accurate assessment of just how much oil Kuwait really has got left.

U.S. Dollar Healthier

World Currency Fears Subsiding

LONDON (AP) —The United States dollar strengthened in Europe Thursday, calming fears of a new world currency crisis from Britain's decision to float the pound sterling.

Financial sources looked back on the first full week since the surprise British move last Friday and said it now appeared that the threat of the floating pound to other major currencies had been overemphasized.

The pound closed in London at $2,4662 U.S., in effect a devaluation of a little more than 5 per cent from its old parity of $2.60. The pound also weakened on Continental markets but trading was relatively light.

When the pound was first floated outside its former official limits, there were widespread predictions that it would drop quickly by 8 per cent to $2.40, drag the dollar down as well and perhaps force change in the world exchange rate scale worked out in Washington last December.

But the temporary shutdown of foreign exchange markets during a long weekend and the decision by European finance ministers Monday to defend the exchange rates worked out in Washington, appeared to have removed much of the confusion evidenced earlier in the week.

Tokyo, the last major foreign exchange market to reopen, fell into the European pattern when the dollar steadied there too.

The dollar rose in Paris, Frankfurt, Zurich and the smaller European markets. It also rose in London against the sinking pound.

Throughout the week of trial since the pound was floated, the U.S. dollar has remained within official exchange rate limits on most of the European markets.

Another New Career For Charles Neapole

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Neapole leaves his post today as president of the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges to begin a new career as a general business consultant.

The man who transformed the exchanges from a money-losing operation to a profit-maker said Thursday he would like to help the small businessman in such matters as arranging finances and functioning profitably.

"It is not my ambition to make a fortune, but to keep my mind young and active," said Neapole, who spent 45 years in the banking business before accepting the top job at the exchanges in mid-1966.

When Neapole, 67, left the Royal Bank of Canada as director and vice-president in 1966 to join the Montreal stock exchanges he had taken over an operation that recorded a cash loss of $225,000.

Within a five-year period the loss was turned into a profit of nearly $240,000 — representing a "turnaround of nearly $465,000."

Economy Rolling

OTTAWA (CP) — The economy rolled ahead in April despite the largest loss of production from industrial disputes in more than a decade, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The index of real domestic product rose to 173.7 in April from 172.7 in March and 171.8 in February, based on 1961 output equalling 100.

Statistics Canada said it revised the March figure upwards slightly, to 172.7 from 172.5, and then computed the new April figure.

In percentage terms, the April gain was six-tenths of 1 per cent, compared with a March gain of one-half of 1 per cent.

Ford Harness Faulty

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. Thursday announced the recall of 4 million 1970 and 1971 model sedans and station wagons to replace a faulty part on the shoulder safety belts. The faulty part, called a grommet, is a plastic locking device which holds the stud of the shoulder belts to the lap belts. Ford said the fault affects few cars because so few drivers use shoulder belts regularly.

B.C. Hydro Contract 'Pleasant News'

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

BUSINESS TOPICS

Big machinery production envisages clanging metal, welding torch flares, furnaces, nuts, bolts and other mechanical paraphernalia. The human factor tends to fade.

Therefore, a recent item in Soviet Union Today, the U.S.S.R.'s Canadian Embassy publication, was intriguing in that it presented views of employees of Leningrad Metal Plant, who have begun preliminary work on two 444,000-kilowatt radial-axle turbines, worth $5.2 million. The turbines will be the third and fourth to be installed in B.C.'s Mica Dam power project.

Writer Avtonom Nepomnyashchi said that the fact that the Leningrad plant was able to land the contract in competition with other major foreign firms was "pleasant news to us all."

Here are excerpts from the employees he interviewed:

Glb Shchegolev, chief turbine designer: "The talks on the supply of our equipment to Canada were held in Vancouver. I recall with a warm feeling the meetings I had with Canadian colleagues: Dr. Shrum, Chairman, British Columbia Hydro authority, and Mr. Latimere, an engineer. These were specialists of a very high rating . . .

". . . the machines for Mica Dam will demand from each one of us, whether designer or turner, greater attention. However, I am 100 per cent sure that the Canadians will be supplied with turbines of great reliability, high quality and, as specialists put it, of a high power standard."

Vitaly Vikhirev, project engineer: "A large team of design engineers at the bureau of special turbines is actually already tackling the job. So far it is still hard to offer a detailed technical specification of the basic model.

"The Canadian specialists made rather high demands to the quality of the manufacture of the turbines. These demands are quite justified and acceptable for us.

"A specialist will understand the trend of our work if I say that the rotors of the hydroturbines for Mica Dam will be made from low-carbon chrome-nickel steel, with two dismountable parts. For the first time, the spiral chamber will be built of plate steel . . ."

Gennady Yablonsky, design engineer: "At Expo 67 in Montreal . . . and near it, I saw some high standards of production. As a specialist, I was particularly interested in the fact that even in 1967 Canada was partially using 750-kilovolt AC high lines. This was confirmation of the high standards of the Canadian power industry."

Grigory Zinoviev, foreman, mechanical section: ". . . this is the first time we are fulfilling an order placed by Canada. And for me personally it is noteworthy also because it coincides with the 30th anniversary of establishment of diplomatic relations between our countries.

"It was 1942 then, at the peak of the war, we fought with Canadians against a common enemy. At that time I was a scout, taking part in the defence of Leningrad, surrounded by the Hitlerites. And several hundred kilometres from my native city, Murmansk was receiving the ships of the Allied convoys. There were some Canadian seamen with those convoys. And this means that we fought side by side."

Vasily Marchenko, a young vertical lathe operator: "I've been working at the plant only several months. Yet, I'm proud of the plant trademark and of the high quality of its produce, just as proud as my comrades.

"I know that our turbines will get into good hands; the skills of Canadian workers and specialists are known to everyone. I also know how important Mica Dam is for the economy of British Columbia."

Exchanges Take Holiday

TORONTO (CP) — All Canadian stock exchanges, the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and most commodity markets will be closed Monday, July 3.

The closing is to mark Dominion Day, which falls on Saturday, July 1.

The New York and American stock exchanges and other United States financial markets will be closed Tuesday, July 4, for Independence Day.

Trevor Davis Comments

In an article on B.C. private schools published in the Colonist Wednesday, Trevor Davis of North Saanich was quoted at some length on his views of some of the drawbacks to the public school system.

The series, of which the article was a part, has been more than a year in preparation, and the views attributed to Davis were taken from an interview about a year ago.

"They do not," Davis said after reading the article, "necessarily represent my views now. There are many pros and cons to both the public school system and private schools."

Money Supply Increasing

Cash Still Counts

OTTAWA (CP) — The cashless society still is a long way off and may never come in the full sense of the term, says the June issue of the Bank of Canada Review.

Despite the growing use of cheques, credit cards and computers, the amount of money in circulation continues to grow to meet the daily needs of the public, the publication says.

An article on banknotes and coins making up part of the so-called money supply says the use of cash has increased almost as much as total consumer expenditure per capita in recent years.

The reasons given are the continued use of cash for many small purchases, both of necessities and of small luxuries, and the insistence of the big food supermarkets on cash payment.

Another factor is the large number of children and young people who want and use cash.

At the beginning of the year, there was more than $4.1 billion in Bank of Canada notes issued, of which $3.5 billion was in the hands of the general public. The remaining $600 million was in the tills of the chartered banks, available to meet hourly transaction needs.

Bank of Canada statistics showed another $483 million circulating in coins.

But these are relatively small amounts compared with the $34.5 billion of Canadian-dollar deposits in the chartered banking system. It is this account-book money, handled by cheques for the most part, that makes up the bulk of the total money supply.

The Bank of Canada Review, published by the Bank, said figures on banknotes in circulation refer only to banknotes that have been issued by the Bank of Canada through its nine branch offices across the country. How much of it has been lost or destroyed, nobody knows.

Distillery To Swallow Thousands of Bushels

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Construction started Thursday on a $9 million distillery which ultimately will use 800,000 bushels of southern Alberta grain each year.

On a 25-acre site in the city's northeast section, the distillery will initially use 400,000 bushels of grain when it starts production of whisky, vodka and gin in Sept., 1973.

Birdie from Bunker Earns Shirley Lead

MAMARONECK, N.Y. (AP) — Shirley Englehorn took a one-stroke lead with a par 72 in Thursday's first round of the $40,000 U.S. Women's Open golf championship.

Miss Englehorn was the only player in a field of 150 professionals and amateurs to match par.

Pam Barnett and Betsy Cullen were one stroke back with 73s.

Shirley was one over after the first nine. She bogeyed two par fours but took a birdie two on the No. 6.

"That was a great shot," she said of the birdie, one of the handful carded on the 6226-yard Winged Foot Golf Club course, still suffering the effects of tropical storm Agnes.

"I knocked the tee shot into the bunker and holed it out from about 30 feet."

Behund Misses Barnett and Cullen with 74s were Kathy Cornelius, 1956 Open winner; Marbo Sasaki of Japan; and Kathy Ahern and Gloria Ehret.

Jane Blalock, who struggled in with a 78, summarized the day's play well when she said the course was in control of her instead of her being in control of the course.

Kathy Whitworth, second to Miss Blalock on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour money list this season and the all-time money winner who has won every major title except this one, shot a seven-over-par 79.

So did defending champion JoAnne Carner, 1965 winner Carol Mann and at least four of the U.S. Curtis Cup team members — Laura Baugh, Jane Bastanchury Booth, Barbara McIntire and Martha Wilkinson Kirouac.

Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., was four strokes off the pace with a 76 on nine-hole scores of 39-37.

Amateur Marlene Stewart Streit of Fonthill, Ont., carded 40-38—78, and Sandra Post Elliot, formerly of Oakville, Ont., shot 38-41—79.

Dale Shaw of Victoria shot an 84.

Rain Delays Golf Event

CLEVELAND (AP) — Heavy rain forced postponement of the opening round of the $150,000 Cleveland open golf tournament today after about half the field of 150 had teed off at the Tanglewood Country Club.

Alec Merriman

There isn't anything to get excited about yet, but a few coho are starting to show at some Island fishing waters.

Sooke waters have been giving up the occasional coho, but they have really been eclipsed by the terrific chinook fishing in those waters . . . two in the 50s in the past week.

Some coho returned to Clayton's — Northwest Bay waters — off Mistaken Island — on Tuesday with a couple of boats getting limits on green flies and six to eight ounces of weight, but the chinook fishing off the tip of Ballenas Island still holds the limelight in that area.

At Deep Bay there have been a few coho, but "not too many" according to John Cushing. Main action has been for chinooks in Lambert Channel, between Hornby and Denman Island, fished very deep with one pound of weight.

At French Creek anglers have started getting blues again on the surface. One to two ounces of weight, flies and firewing Krippled K spoons have been taking them.

At Comox some of the anglers have cruised right across the Gulf to Powell River waters trying to find the elusive coho, and report slim pickings.

Bates Beach chinook fishing success dropped slightly in recent windy weather, but the anglers who brave the early morning and evening waters are still getting fantastic chinook fishing with plugs along the kelp beds. Coho are reported few and far between.

Coho success at Campbell River has been a little better, but again the main action is on chinooks along the kelp beds, from the river mouth along the coastline towards Courtenay.

Off the forestry station right at Campbell River has been a hot spot and we saw Jim Sweet use plug cut herring to mooch three chinooks approaching the 20-pound class on Friday night. We hit into one on bucktail fly and small spinner . . . and we even got a dogfish on that rigging. John Ebert got three up to 23 pounds Saturday.

Spinners casting from the Argonaut wharf and the Government wharf in Campbell River are lining the docks each evening and are having some success with Buzz Bombs, Deadly Dicks, and plug-cut or live herring.

Moochers with live herring and trollers going deep with Strip Teaser and Hootchies are picking up chinooks in Sansum Narrows and in the Tent-Thetis Island waters. Cowichan Bay is giving up a mixed bag of bluebacks and jacksprings.

Porlier Pass-Active Pass waters are reported to have started clearing, following the mud from the Fraser River runoffs.

Saanich Inlet fishing is one of the brighter spots with many anglers from both ends of the Inlet returning with limits of chinooks and bluebacks. Harold Helander picked up a 34.14-pound chinook in the Narrows of Finlayson Arm Tuesday afternoon. The fish have been biting all day and at different depths on a variety of lures.

Oak Bay and Victoria waters are rated fair for big chinooks but there has been heavy fishing pressure and some and Minnow Teaser.

Beechey Head is still the dream area for 20 to 50-pound chinooksb ut here has been heavy fishing pressure and some of the lucky anglers have been using two pounds and more weight to keep their lines moving close to the bottom. The big chinook fishing spills over from Beechey Head to William Head and Pedder Bay on the east and Secretary Island and Otter Point to the west.

Freshwater fishing is worthwhile, but a long way from being good. Cowichan Lake is still one of the best bets and any bass lake will be productive now. Cutthroats are being taken in river estuaries, but fishing is spotty. Some summer steelhead are being taken.

If you are becoming disturbed about the apparent lack of coho this year, you have good reason to be.

Latest report from the federal fisheries marketing board shows the volumes of salmon delivered to ports south of Cape Caution. And up until June 17 they show only 4000 pounds of coho this year, compared with 76,000 pounds of coho for the same period last year.

The cumulative catch of chinooks is surprising, as it seemed the chinook catch would be away up this year, but it isn't . . . 3,918,000 pounds this year to 3,914,000 pounds for the same period last year.

Canoe Club members will meet July 6, about 6:30 p.m., on an island in Thetis Lake. Advice is to take along a supper and if you don't have a canoe hail a ride from the point and someone will pick you up.

* * *

Outdoor Club of Victoria takes two of its longer trips this up-coming holiday weekend. Some will go to the Olympic Peninsula to hike around Boulder Lake and the Happy Valley Ridge.

Others will backpack and campout in the Marble Plateau area of Strathcona Park where the club has built a hiking trail.

Braves Peddle Cepeda Promptly Buy McLain

The National League club sold veteran first baseman Orlando Cepeda to Oakland Athletics for an undisclosed amount of cash and the right to purchase pitcher Denny McLain.

They promptly exercised the option by buying McLain from Athletics' Birmingham farm club of the Southern League.

Cepeda and McLain have been having difficulties with their respective clubs.

Cepeda, a hard-hitting first baseman and veteran of 14 National League seasons, owns a .298 lifetime batting average. Less than two weeks ago he walked out on the Braves and was suspended for two days.

Cepeda claimed he wasn't being played enough.

Cepeda, 34, the 1967 National League's most valuable player while with St. Louis Cardinals, was batting .298 with four home runs and nine runs batted in this season.

McLain, a two-time winner of the Cy Young Award in the American League, won 31 games for Detroit Tigers in 1968. He had been sent to the minors earlier in the year by Oakland Athletics manager Dick Williams.

McLain, the AL's most valuable player in 1968, had an eight-year career mark of 127-84 before the 1971 season.

McLain was 1-2 this year with Oakland and had a 6.05 earned run average. With Birmingham, he was 3-3 with a 6.32 ERA.

The righthander ran into difficulties with bankruptcy proceedings and allegedly carrying a gun and was suspended for the first half of the 1970 season by baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

He finished the year with a 3-5 mark and was traded to Washington in 1971, where he was 10-22.

The fourth-place Braves, despite Hank Aaron's 654th career home run, bowed, 8-6, to San Diego Padres to remain 10½ games behind leading Cincinnati Reds in the National League West.

The leading Athletics remained five games ahead of Chicago in the American League West when first-baseman Mike Epstein slammed his 13th homer of the season in the eighth inning of the second game for a 3-1 win over the White Sox, who had won the opener, 4-0.

Hockey Clubs Keep Busy

In the wake of Bobby Hull's signing this week with Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association, the National Hockey League and WHA have intensified activities.

Busiest club Thursday was Toronto Maple Leafs, who announced the signing of 13 players, leaving only star centre Dave Keon and four players who have already jumped to the WHA not in the fold.

Veteran centre Norm Ullman, rumored about to jump to Alberta in the WHA, led the signers with a three-year pact. Ron Ellis, Guy Trottier, Jim McKenny, Brian Glennie, Paul Henderson, Pierre Jarry and Denis Dupere agreed to two-year contracts and Jacques Plante, Garry Monahan, Mike Pelyk, Daryl Sittler and Errol Thompson, with Tulsa of the Central Hockey League last season, signed one-year contracts. Rick Kehoe and Bobby Baun have one year remaining on two-year contracts.

Goalkeeper Bernie Parent, Jim Harrison, Rick Ley and Larry Pleau have jumped to WHA clubs but general manager Jim Gregory stressed that the four were still "part of our organization" and that they would be offered new contracts before Aug. 10 according to NHL regulations.

Stanley Cup-champion Boston Bruins announced the signing of two goaltenders. Ross Brooks, an eight-year veteran who led the American Hockey League last season while playing for Boston Braves, and Curt Ridley, who played at Oklahoma City of the CHL last season, were signed to multi-year contracts.

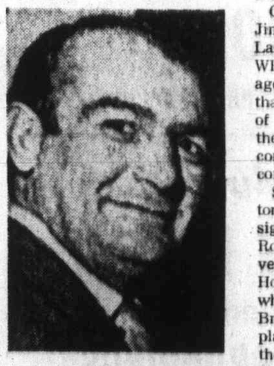
Philadelphia was the busiest WHA team, signing five players and a general manager. Forwards Brian Campbell of the Chicago Black Hawks, Don O'Donoghue of California Golden Seals and Danny Lawson of Buffalo Sabres jumped to the WHA club and the Blazers also acquired two young defencemen, Richard Campeau and Ron Plumb.

Forty-two-year-old Dave Creighton, who played 13 years in the NHL with four teams, was named the Blazers' general manager. He held the same position with Providence of the AHL previously.

Rugged Reggie Fleming, who amassed 1468 minutes in penalties during his NHL career, joined the Chicago Cougars of the WHA. His signing was coupled with the introduction of the team's owners, Jordon H. Kaiser, a wealthy Chicago real estate developer, and his brother, Walter.

Quebec Les Nordiques brought their player strength up to 11 with six more signings. Yves Bergeron, Punch Cartier, Mike McNamara, Mark Shawchuk and Rocky Martin all agreed to two-year pacts but terms of Les Nordiques' first NHL defector's contract, Michel Parizeau, were not discussed. The 24-year-old centre played with St. Louis Blues and Philadelphia Flyers last year.

Paul Hurley, former property of Boston Bruins, has agreed to play with New England Whalers of the WHA. The 26-year-old defenceman played last season for the Braves in the AHL and is the Whalers' 17th player to sign.



New Contract

Saying "Sam has my confidence", Sam Berger, owner of Montreal Alouettes of the CFL, announced Thursday that head-coach Sam Etcheverry had been given a new contract. Etcheverry also got a new assistant coach, Fred Wallner, former head coach of Hartford Knights of the Atlantic Coast League, to replace Bob Ward, who labelled Etcheverry "incompetent" in resigning recently.

Dolphins Sharp for Meet

Canadian Dolphins Swim Club of Vancouver are razor-sharp for this weekend's meet at Crystal Pool.

Deryk Snelling, coach of the Dolphins and also Canada's national swimming coach, has had 38 of his competitors on a California training junket to prepare for the three-day, 15th annual B.C. age group and senior swimming championships which get under way at noon today.

More than 60 Dolphins are expected to compete in the meet, which has attracted swimmers from 30 clubs including two each from California and Washington state and one from Oregon.

Heading the list are Dolphins' "golden twins," Donna-Marie Gurr and Leslie Cliff, a couple of triple gold medal winners for Canada at the Pan American Games at Cali last summer.

They are only two of eight Dolphins who have already attained Olympic-standard times. Debbie Bengtson, Wendy Cook, Jennifer McHugh, Mary-Beth Rondeau, Martha Nelson and Bruce Robertson have all reached Olympic-qualifying times and will be competing here.

Miss Bjune will be leading coach Monty Holding's 32-member team to the meet.

Heats today and Saturday start at 12 noon and begin at 9 a.m. on Sunday. Finals for the first two days get under way at 7:30 p.m. and at 4 p.m. on Sunday.

The meet is jointly sponsored by Juan de Fuca Coho Swim Club and Olympian Swim Club of Victoria and the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association (B.C. Section).

Headmas Refutes

MILL BAY — David Mackenzie, headmaster of Brentwood College boys' school here, Thursday rejected as "utter nonsense" claims that Brentwood had embarrassed Canadian rowing officials at the Henley Royal Regatta in England Wednesday by failing to compete in a coxless fours race for the Wyfold Cup.

In a statement telephoned to Brentwood College from England Thursday, Mackenzie said: "These reports which suggested that we missed the race because the crew might have overslept are in obsolute error.

"It's patently ridiculous to suggest that this school is going to fly 6,000 miles to England and then fail to wake up in time for the race."

Mackenzie said that arranged transportation had arrived late at the school's hotel in Sutton, 20 miles from the Henley course. Because of

Regals Host Columbus On Saturday

Probably the strongest side Vancouver Columbus has ever fielded will play Victoria Regals in a Premier Soccer League game at 7 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Columbus, leaders of the league, tied 0-0 with Regals at the start of the season but the mainly Italian team has been bolstered by three former English professionals — playing-coach Alan O'Neil, formerly with Aston Villa, linkman Brian Fagan from Colchester and winger Alan Sproates, who played for Gateshead.

Playing-coach Brian Hughes will field the same Regals side that crushed Wolfsburg-Gottingen of West Germany, 3-0, Tuesday except that George Hyne will replace veteran Peter Wilson.

As well as hurling a five-hitter, Miss Blackstock cracked two homer runs — a grand-slam effort in the second inning and a three-run homer in the third. In Empress Paint's 10-run second inning, Miss Blackstock had a three-base hit which drove in one run.

Headmaster Refutes Claim

MILL BAY — David Mackenzie, headmaster of Brentwood College boys' school here, Thursday rejected as "utter nonsense" claims that Brentwood had embarrassed Canadian rowing officials at the Henley Royal Regatta in England Wednesday by failing to compete in a coxless fours race for the Wyfold Cup.

In a statement telephoned to Brentwood College from England Thursday, Mackenzie said: "These reports which suggested that we missed the race because the crew might have overslept are in obsolute error.

"It's patently ridiculous to suggest that this school is going to fly 6,000 miles to England and then fail to wake up in time for the race."

Mackenzie said that arranged transportation had arrived late at the school's hotel in Sutton, 20 miles from the Henley course. Because of this, the crew arrived at the course 20 minutes before Brentwood's heat was to begin.

"Tony Carr, our rowing coach, then asked Henley officials if we could scratch from the race and they said it was quite in order for us to do so," Mackenzie said.

"It's just utter nonsense to suggest we embarrassed anyone," he added.

"Brentwood had sent two telegrams to Henley officials before departing Vancouver Monday in an attempt to scratch from the coxless fours race as Carr wanted to conserve the crew's energy for the Princess Elizabeth Cup high school eights contest," the headmaster said.

However, the school received no reply to its telegrams before leaving for England.

"The coxless fours is one of the casual races at Henley and is regarded as such by the officials," Mackenzie said.

"When we cancelled our appearance on Wednesday, they were quite happy with our decision."

A Canadian Press story Thursday quoted Peter King, vice-president of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, as saying at Henley "I think they (the Brentwood crew) must have overslept after the flight from Canada. There is going to be an inquiry. Everyone is very disappointed."

Refuting Kings' statement, Mackenzie said: "I am very angry that he should make this kind of irresponsible comment without first finding out the facts."

Brentwood and Ridley Meet at Henley Today

HENLEY, England (CP) — Crews representing two Canadian schools were set to confront one another today in semi-final competition for a major challenge cup at the Henley Royal Regatta.

Two other Canadian crews also have won their way into the semi-finals of events scheduled for today. A fifth group from Canada, representing the University of British Columbia, will meet Spartak of Moscow for the Stewards' Cup in the final of that four-man competition Saturday.

Ridley College of St. Catharines, Ont., defeated King's School of Chester, England, and Brentwood College School of Vancouver Island beat Bryanston School of Berkshire in competition for the Princess Elizabeth Trophy for eight-oar crews in the schoolboy category.

Brentwood has the disadvantage of using a borrowed shell following financial complications which kept the British Columbians from shipping their own to Britain.

But Brentwood coach Tony Carr said the race promises to be closely fought since "we can match Ridley stroke for stroke."

On Thursday, they overwhelmed City Orient of London in a quarter-final race, winning by 4¾ lengths.

Their semi-final opponents will be Spartak of Leningrad.

Ridley has a companion crew from St. Catharines involved in the semi-final action today.

Meeting the University of London in the Prince Philip Challenge contest for four-man crews is St. Catharines Rowing Club, which beat Leander of Henley by 1¼ lengths in a Thursday quarter-final.

Ridley entered its quarter-final beset with doubts about the fitness of some members of its crew, who suffered a variety of physical mishaps in training sessions.

But despite worry on this score, Ridley's Thursday performance was impressive.

"We were lucky we had a good lead," said Campbell, recalling one rowing error by his crew in the late stages of its race against King's.

The UBC crew in the four-man final Saturday has reached that stage of the competition on byes.

Moose Lodge	12	3	9	0	6
Westendale	13	2	11	0	4

Donna Blackstock had quite a night Thursday at Hyacinth Park.

A pitcher who also wields a mighty bat, Miss Blackstock was the inspiration behind Empress Paint's 18-2 romp over Moose Lodge Loyals in the Victoria Senior Women's Softball League.

As well as hurling a five-hitter, Miss Blackstock cracked two home runs — a grand-slam effort in the second inning and a three-run homer in the third. In Empress Paint's 10-run second inning, Miss Blackstock had a three-base hit which drove in one run.

In a second game, Esquimalt Combos downed Westendale Constructionettes, 17-10.

Eagles Need Late Spree

Langford Drywall	17	8	9	0	16
B.C. Tel	17	6	11	0	12
London Boxing	17	2	15	0	4

Eagles produced a big-hitting finish at Macdonald Park Thursday night.

With a six-run spree in the final inning, Eagles snapped a 2-2 tie to defeat Castaways, 8-2.

The victory enabled Eagles to stay six points ahead of Capital Builders at the top of the Victoria Industrial Softball League.

Builders, with Mike Derry batting in six runs, defeated B.C. Tel, 11-7, and Langford Drywall scored three runs in the seventh inning to down London Boxing Club, 10-9.

Perfect Record on Line

Esquimalt-Victoria, the other team in the three-team, double-knockout event, plays the winner Sunday.

The tourney continues until at least Tuesday, all games starting at 6 p.m., with a game scheduled Wednesday should the losers' bracket finalist defeat the winners' bracket finalist on Tuesday.

The district champion earns a berth in the seven-team B.C. championship — the last step — which begins July 9 at Mahon Park in North Vancouver. Saanich has brought the provincial title to Vancouver Island three times, in 1964, 1968 and 1969. Defending champion is North Vancouver.

Off-Track Betting Bill Introduced

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has introduced legislation that would clear the way for establishment of off-track horse-race gambling under provincial authority and federal supervision.

A long-promised bill, introduced in the Commons by Justice Minister Otto Lang, would permit off-track pari-mutuel betting only under the authority of a provincial government or some other body designated by the provincial government to issue licences.

Over-riding authority to issue regulations governing off-track betting would rest with the federal government, but the provinces would have substantial regulatory authority on most details.

Lang said there is little chance that the legislation will be passed by Parliament in the current session. Meantime, he said, his department is inviting comment on the legislation from interested parties.

Equals Record

WARSAW (AP) — Pamela Kilborn of Australia equalled the women's world record in the 100-metre hurdles Wednesday, clocking 12.5 seconds at a track meet in Warsaw. East Germany's Annelie Erhardt had set the record June 15 in Potsdam.

Unheralded American Extends Net Favorite

LONDON (Reuter) — Stan Smith of the United States, Wimbledon's hottest male favorite for many years, overcame unexpected stiff opposition Thursday from lowly-ranked American tennis player Alex Mayer to reach the final 16 in the men's singles.

Smith looked out of touch against Mayer, who had been forced to play in a qualifying tournament to get into the Wimbledon draw. Smith won, 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 9-7.

Mayer, 20, troubled Smith with a powerful service but it finally failed him in the 16th game of the fourth set when he twice doubled-faulted.

WON BIG MATCH

Laura Dupont, 23, of the U.S., shrugged off three match points in the second set to defeat one of the top British players, Joyce Williams, 7-9, 8-6, 6-2.

Mrs. Williams, 29, is not seeded but is a member of Britain's Wightman Cup team.

On other women's second-round action, Chris Evert, the 17-year-old American tennis prodigy, showed few signs of nerves when she made her debut on Wimbledon's famed centre court.

Miss Evert, No. 4 seed, beat Jan Newberry of the U.S., 6-3, 6-0.

The match was much closer than the score suggests as Miss Newberry, 18, put up stiff resistance in lengthy back-court duels.

In men's third-round singles matches, second-seeded Ilie Nastase of Romania had a comfortable win over West German Davis Cup player Jurgen Fassbender, 9-8, 6-3, 6-4.

Another straight-sets winner was fifth-seeded Jan Kodes, a 25-year-old Czechoslovak student. He beat Dan Bleckinger of the U.S., 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

Cricket Festival Starts Monday

COWICHAN — Hosts Cowichan Cricket Club will play Chris Rowe's XI from Victoria when the first annual Cowichan Cricket Festival gets under way here Monday.

The five-day festival, featuring teams from Victoria and Vancouver, is being staged at Shawnigan Lake Boys' School which has one of the best grass wickets in Canada.

Several leading American players will bolster the Vancouver teams and some first-class cricket is expected.

Tuesday, Cowichan plays J. W. S. Tait's XI from Vancouver, on Wednesday Cowichan meets Brian Rudgard's Victoria XI, on Thursday the hosts play G. W. K. Webster's XI from Vancouver and festival ends Friday with a game between Cowichan and D. M. Pearson's XI from Vancouver.

Play starts at 1 p.m. each day and ends at 6 p.m. Spectators are welcome.

Hawks Mum

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Black Hawks are remaining mum on losing superstar Bobby Hull to the World Hockey Association "until at least after our lawyers study the case," a club spokesman said Thursday.

Shamsky Moves

CHICAGO (AP) — Oakland Athletics announced Wednesday they have acquired outfielder-first baseman Art Shamsky, 30, from Chicago Cubs for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Late Heroics Help Sell CFL

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian football returned to United States television Wednesday for the first time in six years and last-minute heroics by Jesse Mims helped convince a group of watchers here that the Canadian brand of ball offers an exciting alternative to the U.S. variety.

About 100 sports writers, advertisers and television executives gathered in the posh Park Plaza Hotel ballroom to watch a live color broadcast of the Canadian Football League's all-star game from Calgary.

The event was a "kick-off party" to mark the beginning of a weekly series of 20 CFL games to be broadcast over more than 100 U.S. television stations.

There was much earnest discussion of the major differences of the Canadian game — no fourth down, the rouge, backfields in motion, the larger field.

But it was Mims' catch of a nearly-intercepted ball and his touchdown which helped Calgary to its 23-22 victory over the CFL all-stars that brought cheers from the group here.

Because the games will be telecast in the U.S. weeks before the National Football League begins its season play, the producers of the series are touting the CFL action as "the only game in town."

Who's Hilarious?

There were usual scenes of joy throughout Victoria area Wednesday as elementary schools closed for summer holidays, but some students, like these two, took a more sober approach to last day of classes. Weighed down with lunchboxes, Norma Frost, 9, of 1332 Hillside and brother Rodney also had load of supplies, samples of year's work to take home from Oaklands school.

Petitions Growing Daily Over Intellects' Trials

By RAY KERR
Colonist Staff

Greater Victorians are daily adding more of their signatures to a list being prepared to protest the coming trials of Czechoslovak writers and intellectuals.

Dr. G. L. Mares, 970 McBriar, said Thursday he organized the action after reading a series of news items published in the Colonist during the past six months or so, "and especially the article published around June 1, about the oncoming trials of the Czechoslovak writers and intellectuals, among them Mr. Ludek Pachman."

The gathering of signatures was organized by a Victoria teacher and chess player, Ray Vickery, 3772 Tillicum.

The chess connection is in the fact that Pachman for decades has been one of the leading chess players in the world; was playing captain of the Czechoslovak team in a number of chess Olympiads and for years was one of the editors of the Czechoslovak national chess magazine.

However, when Soviet tanks rumbled into Czechoslovakia in August of 1968, Pachman was one of the most vociferous objectors. Even though he was abroad at the time and could have safely remained in West Germany for the rest of his life, he chose to go back to Prague because "my place is with my people."

Before long Pachman was imprisoned and sometime later was reported to have suffered grave injuries "in a fall," according to prison officials.

'Protest Against Persecution of Czechoslovakians'

He managed to recover, was released, then again thrown into prison recently to await trial with a number of others.

"The purpose of this action (the Victoria-area petition) is to help the London, England, committee in its effort to obtain a fair trial for those who were arrested during the recent purges in Czechoslovakia in the aftermath of the infamous Soviet invasion of 1968," said Mares.

The petition reads:

"The undersigned wish to join the ranks of those who raise their voices in protest against the persecution of Czechoslovak citizens because of their progressive and humanistic interpretation of modern socialist ideas. Although understanding that he is only one among many being persecuted, we wish to come to the defence of Ludek Pachman, an internationally-known Czech chess champion and writer.

"We understand that this man is shortly to be brought to trial at the Superior People's Court in Prague, and that his offences came out of his support for the Dubcek government in 1968, when a liberal, indigenous form of communism was brutally crushed by the Soviet Union and her allies.

"We urge the general secretary of the Czechoslovak Communist Party, Gustav Husak, to speed up the proceedings against Pachman and to give ample information about the legal grounds for his arrest. We further urge him (Husak) to prove his sincerity by proclaiming a policy of non-retribution for active participation by Czechoslovak citizens in the events of 1968, and that he satisfy the justified curiosity of a growing circle of international observers and friends of free Czechoslovakia," the petition concludes.

All those interested in signing the petition should get in touch with either Vickery or Mares.

$10,000 Chamber Deficit

City Handout Chances Slim

Any request by the Victoria Chamber of Commerce for a grant to cover a $10,000 deficit incurred during Victorian Days celebrations, would "probably be given a cool reception," Ald. Bill Tindall said Thursday.

"The question of grants has been of grave concern to council for quite some time; there is only so much money to go around," Tindall said in an interview.

Word of the chamber's $10,000 deficit from the celebrations last month came earlier Thursday from Helen Biernes, retiring president of the chamber.

This year's fund-raising campaign hadn't been as successful as anticipated, she said.

She didn't indicate where the chamber would get the money to cover the deficit, but it was expected that the city would be approached.

The chamber leader said support from local businessmen for this year's events had been "tremendous" and it was hoped there would be more money-raising events next year.

"World of Pleasure"
PEARSON

We don't expect you to buy Pinto just because it is priced under these 1600cc 2-door import models.

A nice price is only the beginning of value in Pinto.

In the box at the right you can see that the Ford Pinto is priced well under these popular import models. There's more. It's what you get for that price that really completes the definition of value. The imports offer some things that Pinto doesn't. But Pinto offers some things these imports don't.

Rack-and-pinion steering, for instance. The rack-and-pinion system is used by some of the world's great racing cars. It makes for precise, responsive handling. To you, that means you should be able to get your Pinto into that tight little parking spot a little easier.

Pinto also has a wider stance than any of the models mentioned. Pinto was built with a wider stance to give you greater stability. Which should come in handy on windy days on Canadian expressways.

Now some of the imports have recently been talking about the features you get in their basic price. Well, with Pinto, you get a choice. We've taken some features that a lot of people seem to like with their Pinto sedan, and we've put them together in a group that offers particular value. Available only as a group and priced at only $100* you can now order front disc brakes, bodyside molding, whitewalls, wheel covers, and a rear window defroster on the 2-door sedan. *Pinto will then be priced at $2393. And that means Pinto will still be priced below all three of these popular import models.

Of course, if you decide not to order this group of features, the price for Pinto is then $2293*. The choice is up to you. And the same can be said for other options which Pinto offers. You see, with Pinto, you don't have to pay for what you might not want. These Pinto advantages simply add up to the fact that we are trying to make sure that Pinto offers you a little more value than the competition.

Another example of this effort is our new Pinto wagon. We figured if you are interested in buying a wagon, you're probably most interested in the amount of cargo area you get. That's why we designed our Pinto wagon to offer you more than sixty cubic feet of cargo space; which is more than the VW Squareback, Datsun 510, or the Toyota Corolla wagon.

Even with all the cargo space, the Pinto wagon is still only about ten inches longer than our Pinto sedan. Which means that it still offers small car maneuverability.

And our Pinto wagon at $2628*, as you might expect by now, is priced under these VW, Datsun and Toyota wagons.

And a lot of value.

Taken together, all these facts lead us to feel that our Pinto offers you a little more. But don't just take our word for it. Take a closer look at Pinto for yourself. At your local Ford Dealer.

This is an explanatory paragraph. It is rather lengthy, but we want to be as clear and accurate as possible. The comparison of prices in the box above, is based on manufacturers' suggested retail prices. They do not include destination and delivery; preparation and conditioning charges (included for Datsun 510); license and provincial tax, because these factors vary from region to region. When we refer to Pinto 2-door sedan prices of $2393 and $2293, and the Pinto wagon price of $2628, these are also based on manufacturers' suggested retail prices not including destination and delivery; preparation and conditioning; license and provincial tax. And when we refer to the $100.00 group option price the figure is, once again, based on manufacturers' suggested retail price.

Greenpeace Sailed To Safety

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian-owned nuclear protest vessel Greenpeace III was reported safe Thursday with its crew outside the South Pacific area where France apparently detonated an experimental nuclear device during the weekend.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told reporters that the safety of the three-man ketch, owned and skippered by David McTaggart of Vancouver, had been confirmed.

His statement followed an earlier disclosure by France that Greenpeace left the test zone of its own accord June 21 — four days before the first blast in a planned test series at Mururoa atoll.

Meanwhile, four Australian parachutists were to take off from Sydney Friday ready to drop in the French nuclear testing zone in the South Pacific, a spokesman for the project said Thursday.

Rifleman Gives Up

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE, Que. (CP) — Anthony Gilliland's three-day defence of his house and property against all intruders ended early Thursday after two of his brothers — one from Toronto and the other from Saskatchewan-talked him into turning his rifle over to police.

Police said all charges against the 30-year-old welfare recipient and former television repairman have been dropped.

Two hours after his brothers arrived, Gilliland gave up his fight against what he called a "rich man's conspiracy" to deprive him of his home, where he took a stand with his wife and five children.

GALIANO ISLAND — Regional director of British Columbia for the Media Club of Canada, Mary Backlund, who is also a Colonist correspondent, recently attended a directors meeting of the club at the Skyline Hotel, in Ottawa.

Militant Segment Plans Big Freeze

BELFAST (Reuter) — Militant Protestants have promised the British government some sensational action at the barricades they plan to set up across Northern Ireland this weekend.

A leader of the Ulster Defence Association (UDA) said Thursday the strategy for paralyzing Ulster's six counties would go a long way toward extracting a promise from the British government that Northern Ireland remain a part of the United Kingdom for good.

The UDA leader, who refused to be named, spoke at a headquarters in the heart of Belfast's Protestant quarter.

The UDA official said assurances given to UDA leaders Wednesday by British administrator William Whitelaw that the British would move against sealed-off Roman Catholic areas were worthless stalling tactics.

Whitelaw promised the UDA that action would be taken to bring down the street barricades in the Catholic "no-go" areas of Londonderry, a main grievance of the UDA. He also assured the Protestants that the people in the no-go areas who have been withholding their rents and local taxes would be forced to pay them.

The UDA said it would not use guns against British troops, but would find other means to prevent the army from dismantling their barriers, usually made up of hijacked cars, trucks and doubledecker buses.

William Hull, chairman of the Loyalist Association of Workers, a powerful Protestant movement, said the troops "may have to run down women and children at the barricades, because the women are with us in this and the majority of loyalists in the province are behind the UDA."

Meanwhile in Dublin three Irishmen were jailed by the Irish republic's new no-jury court for fighting a cross-border gun battle with British troops in Northern Ireland Jan. 21.

Arafat Vows To Fight

Guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat said Thursday Palestinian guerrillas will continue "to carry the armed struggle against the Zionist enemy" using all Arab nations as springboard for their attacks. But, he said, Lebanon's "special circumstances" will be taken into consideration.

Arafat did not elaborate in the statement which followed Beirut and Cairo reports that the Arab guerrillas had agreed to freeze their operations against Israel from Lebanese territory.

Israel has warned officially of more anti-guerrilla strikes into Lebanon unless attacks across the border against Israelis are halted.

In Tel Aviv, military spokesmen reported the appointment of Maj.-Gen. Yitzhak Hofi as commander of the northern front, succeeding Maj.-Gen. Mordechai Gur. Army sources described the switch as "routine," but the northern front includes the Lebanon frontier and is currently Israel's most sensitive militarily.

$102,000 To Get Action

Region Votes Hospital Fund

Young
. . . no logical basis

Capital Region's hospital board decided Thursday to conform to provincial policy and spend more than $100,000 to get action on the new Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

The money will be applied to what is described as "off-site" costs and working capital, aspects of the new hospital to which the provincial government will not contribute.

The largest ingredient of the $102,000 that regional board must find is $65,000 that will be used as working capital. This is money that will pay salaries and other bills until the claims the hospital sends to BCHIS on behalf of patients are satisfied.

Other pre-construction aspects in which BCHIS will not participate include the cost of sewers and waterworks to the hospital's property line on Mount Newton Cross Road in Central Saanich.

Mayor Art Young of Esquimalt, chairman of hospital board, said there was "no logical basis" for charging such costs against local property-owners. However, the hospital could not be delayed any longer and he hoped regional board would dispute the government's policy at the next Union of B.C. Municipalities meeting.

"In the interest of the community's needs, we can't allow this (further delay) to occur," said Young.

The first phase of the hospital will be a $950,000, 75-bed extended care facility. There have been proposals to add an acute-care hospital of equal size to the plant at a later date.

The extended care hospital was approved by regional ratepayers in a referendum in 1968. The referendum was for 600 such beds and the construction of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital and a similar 225-bed centre on Helmcken Road will complete the proposed program.

However, the feasibility of such a hospital on Helmcken Road has once again come under question and at Thursday's meeting of regional hospital board several directors wanted to find an alternative to a $300,000 sewer system that would be needed there.

In addition to providing the hospital with a system that would meet pollution control and engineering standards, such an installation would provide a route to the sea for View Royal's wastes.

The board tabled the matter after discussing the possibility of giving the entire project further review.

Coast Forest Negotiations 'Basically' in Stalemate

Thursday brought another reported failure in the attempt to solve the contract dispute that has closed down the coast forest industry.

"Basically, nothing happened," said International Woodworkers of America negotiator Syd Thompson after the latest meeting of the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations.

"The industry clarified some items, but it didn't move on the monetary items."

Thompson is president of the big Vancouver local. He told the Colonist Thursday's critical meeting with F.I.R. lasted about 2½ hours.

The IWA coast negotiating committee was to meet today to plot its next step.

There have been conflicting reports on whether or not the committee will put the industry's final offer to the 30,000 IWA members on strike. If it does, it will have to decide whether or not to recommend acceptance.

The last position of F.I.R., which represents the forest companies, was a 73 cent-an-hour increase over two years on a base rate of $3.72. The union's final demand has been for $1 an hour over the same period. It had originally asked this amount over one year.

John Billings, F.I.R. president, said in a statement the industry had clarified eight points "in line with most of their (IWA) requests they brought up at Monday's meeting."

"Despite the fact they have been given an extremely good agreement by the industry, it seems impossible to satisfy the union negotiators," Billings said.

He said the IWA negotiators raise new problems at each meeting.

No other meetings have been scheduled between the sides.

Prior to Thursday's meeting, some union negotiators had expressed optimism. They said they felt a settlement would be reached.

The strike began officially eight days ago. It had actually begun in stages at midnight June 14 when the master contract expired.

Once general settlement does come the industry will still be in trouble, according to the 800 fallers who began a wildcat strike in mid-April.

The fallers, demanding an industry-wide pricing formula, have said they don't want the IWA negotiating committee bargaining for them.

Irish Sweepstakes

Six Islanders Drawn

The three dollar dream has come true for six Vancouver Islanders who are among 241 Canadians holding tickets drawn in the Irish Sweepstake in Dublin on Wednesday.

Victoria ticket holders for Saturday's running of the Irish Sweeps derby at Curragh are: LJQ 54807, Alec Irvine; LJC 89613, Ron Dinney; LKB 76773, Lois Clackson Teppes; LJK 69430, Albert Slater and LS 51721, L. G. Kelm.

School Honors Given

CUMBERLAND — School trustee Mrs. Ruth McKellar was a special guest when closing exercises were held at the elementary school Wednesday.

She presented prizes to winners of a poster contest used to promote a referendum — which passed last December — authorizing construction of a new elementary school.

Receiving poster prizes were Terry Leung, grade 7; Grant Franceschini, grade 6; Lisa Montgomery, grade 5; Leanne Miron, grade 4, and Kris Gschwender, grade 3.

The grade 7 academic award was presented to Marilyn Boyce and the citizenship plaque to Russell Clark.

Special service awards were given to Trudy Bortolott and Lynette Souther, who looked after the milk supply for those who brought lunch to school.

Is Ottawa Begging for Enforcement Crunch With Code Changes?

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

Will begging be a legitimate business in Canada as of July 15?

Some legal sources in Victoria said this week changes in the Canadian Criminal Code which become effective on that day make it at least a possibility.

The changes include repeal of the code's vagrancy section, one part of which makes vagrancy by begging a federal offence, and the sources told the Colonist most of the section — including the begging part — is not being replaced.

How police would deal with such beggars as those who are seen most evenings around the government liquor store in the 1400-Block Government was not known because the federal justice department in Ottawa has not sent explanations of the new legislation to B.C.

Indications were the provincial government feels police might act against these beggars after July 15 by using municipal bylaws.

But municipal law experts said municipalities like Victoria do not have anti-begging bylaws because the crime has been a federal one and their councils do not have the authority to write such bylaws just because Ottawa has quit the vagrancy business.

The experts said municipal authority to write bylaws comes from provincial acts. It might therefore take a session of the B.C. Legislature to pass law amendments which would give that authority to municipal councils.

But even then, said one expert, vagrancy has been considered a federal offence and it might take a court test to move it to a lower jurisdiction. And that might go on for years — years during which begging might be a legal business for lack of laws against it.

However, most sources felt the "clarifying material" due soon from Ottawa would eliminate the confusion. If not, they believed a law could be found at some level to prevent wholesale begging and, failing that, they said police could act in other ways.

Beggars around liquor stores, for instance, could be charged with causing a disturbance by being drunk. Or they could be given a night's accommodation in jail through a policy which replaced common drunk charges several years ago. Or anti-loitering laws could be used.

The begging confusion overshadowed several interesting aspects of the Criminal Code changes. Vagrancy by prostitution also has been eliminated as a crime and a new section has been written against prostitution under the name of soliciting.

The most interesting part of that is male prostitution will be subject to exactly the same penalties as female prostitution — a maximum of six months in jail, a $500 fine or both (the usual result in recent years has been a fine of $50 to $100).

A third part of the eliminated vagrancy section prohibits "wandering abroad" without sufficient funds or a proper explanation of the person's presence. This is not being replaced and police may meet such situations through the disturbance-by-drink or jail-stay laws.

Canada's laws now differentiate between thefts of $50 or less and those of more than $50. The changes make those figures $200 instead of $50 and this will apply for theft, false pretences and prossession of known stolen property.

The result will be reduced penalties for persons whose crimes involve between $50 and $200. Taking shopliftings as an example, a first offender who takes items worth more than $50 now must get at least a day in jail and is usually fined or given probation as well.

The jail term will likely be dropped after July 15.

Other changes:

● Air-hijacking becomes a federal crime with a maximum sentence of life in prison.

● Impaired boating becomes a crime while attempted suicide is removed from the list of crimes, and punishment by whipping is eliminated.

● Maximum penalties will increase for some offences to five years from two years for assault causing bodily harm and to 10 years from two years for obstructing justice.

● Sentences on summary conviction (most lesser matters) can be served intermittently if they total less than 90 days. The indication is that means weekend-only jail terms for workers.

● Courts will be able to grant absolute or conditional discharges after convictions for offences where the maximum penalty is less than 14 years. That means for offences below the general level of robbery, manslaughter, criminal negligence and rape.

Ottawa originally planned to put the changes into effect Tuesday but sent word to the provinces in the last 24 hours to delay them until July 15. The delay apparently was due to problems in getting the "clarifying material" ready and on its way.

Victoria police Chief John Gregory said: "If they are changing these laws, how can they expect their enforcement personnel to do a reasonably intelligent job when we have not received the new laws? Nor are we likely to receive them in time to give them any study or permit instruction of our personnel."

Why has Ottawa quit the begging field? One lawyer speculated the laws were written for times like the Depression and the men who write Canada's laws are simply catching up to the affluent society.

Queen Victoria Hospital Obstetrics

Doctors Make Plea For Modernization

Doctors at Queen Victoria Hospital made an urgent plea Thursday for modernization of its facilities for obstetrics and newborn babies.

They warned that unless those facilities are improved, the scope of the hospital's activity in obstetrical and infant care may be restricted. Such restrictions would eventually affect peripheral specialities such as pediatrics and pediatric surgery.

The request was brought to a regular meeting of the hospital's board of management by Dr. J. L. Heffernan, president of medical staff.

He told the board that the foetus and newborn committee of the B.C. Medical Association's Health Planning Council has suggested that high-risk pregnancies be funnelled into hospitals where at least 1,000 babies are delivered each year.

Although Heffernan did not say so, this recommendation is based on the assumption that the busier maternity departments are the most skilled and have better equipment.

Queen Victoria Hospital (formerly St. Joseph's would not come into the category of 1,000 or more births a year. Royal Jubilee is the only such centre on Vancouver Island.

"While we do not have 1,000 births a year, our numbers of newborn are increasing," said Heffernan, adding that doctors were "fervently hoping" money would soon be found to modernize the hospital's obstetrics unit.

(The number of babies delivered at Queen Victoria General last year declined to 922 from 963 in 1970, according to the hospitals annual report for 1971.)

Heffernan pointed out that the hospital has been innovative in its style of maternity practice. It permits fathers to attend deliveries and recently has adopted a "rooming-in" policy for mothers and their newborn. It also has developed an intensive care unit for newborn.

However, there were still great needs in the department. For example, sinks are a badly-needed addition.

"If we don't have a first-class unit we will lose some of our admissions," said Heffernan, adding that many specialists whose work is related to births may subsequently move their practices from the hospital.

Heffernan also told the board that Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and B.C. Hospital Insurance Service appear anxious to allow the hospital to expand its intensive care unit, now a four-bed centre on the third floor for seriously-ill persons.

"Our dreadful need was stressed and BCHIS is not as concerned about capital costs as it is with operating costs," said Heffernan, pointing out that about nine nurses would have to be added to staff.

Heffernan said Loffmark also promised that he would pilot an order-in-council that would change the name of the hospital to Victoria General, which was suggested at an annual meeting of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society in April.

Loffmark said he would make the switch "sometime," said Heffernan, and the doctor hoped the hospital's board would keep "bugging" the minister on that topic.

Queen Victoria Facilities Allow Boost to 500 Beds

Queen Victoria Hospital has the basic facilities to permit expansion to 500 beds, the hospital's board of management was told Thursday night.

The board's planning committee came to the decision after discussions with the heads of the hospital's various services. The only departments that might need more space if the hospital's bed capacity was increased from the present 428 to 500 might be medical records and some parts of the dietary service.

If the hospital expanded to 550 beds, however, many of the supporting services would have to be enlarged.

Several members of Queen Victoria's board also wondered about the contents of reports that the Capital Region's hospital board has kept secret for several months.

One of the studies is of the future roles of Greater Victoria's hospitals and another is an analysis of future acute-care bed needs.

(There have been reports that the study of bed needs states that 120 new acute-care beds will be needed in Greater Victoria by 1981. However, a master plan for Royal Jubilee Hospital alone proposes adding about 150 beds there in the next three or four years.)

Another study that has been made in preparation for a regional hospital referendum — no one is certain when that might be held — is of the degree of obsolesence at Queen Victoria Hospital. This was made by B.C. Hospital Insurance Service.

Library Closed

The Greater Victoria Library and its district branches will be closed during the Dominion Day Holiday Saturday and, with the exception of the Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Brentwood branches, will open again Monday.

JUST PULL OVER

Due to the long holiday weekend, the Malahat patrol of the Juan de Fuca Citizens Band Radio Club will start at 4 p.m. today and will be on the road until Monday night.

The Malahat will be patrolled from Goldstream Park to the Bamberton cutoff until 8 p.m. today and from noon to 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

Motorists requiring assistance should pull to the side of the road and lift the hood of the car.

Pressure May Spur Council To Reid Review—Young

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

If public pressure against the Reid Centre should mount, city council may have to reconsider last week's decision to approve the land-use contract for the controversial Wharf Street development, Victoria Ald. Mike Young said Thursday.

"But there is no evidence at this time that there is widespread opposition to the project," Young said in an interview.

His comments came after an open meeting of about 100 persons at noon Thursday in a courtyard adjacent to the Open Space centre, 510 Fort.

The meeting had been called by Sam Lane, president of the Victoria Visitors' Bureau.

It was decided to circulate a petition urging the mayor to send the land-use contract bylaw back to council for reconsideration.

About 30 persons have, so far, agreed to canvass specific areas of the city for signatures. Only Victoria ratepayers are to sign copies of the petition.

Lane said following the meeting more people were needed to cover the rest of the city.

"We want to get 5,000 or 6,000 signatures before the mayor gets back," he said. Mayor Peter Pollen is vacationing in Europe and he's expected back in Victoria by July 18.

Young, chairman of council's planning committee, said nothing new had been said at Thursday's public meeting. Speakers had used the same arguments against the Reid Centre that were brought up at last week's public hearing in the council chamber.

At the protest meeting speakers again criticized the mayor for being absent from the public hearing. They said he had abandoned those who elected him.

The meeting was to have been held in Open Space, 510 Fort, but the establishment does not have a fire marshall's permit to allow large meetings, so chairs were moved outdoors and the meeting held there.

The question now is, who will sign the land-use contract that was approved last week?

Pollen is absent. Acting mayor, Ald. Clyde Savage said Wednesday only "a major upheaval" could prevent him from signing the document, if he receives it.

Ald. Tom Christie, who will begin his turn as acting mayor Saturday said it might be appropriate to let Pollen do the signing.

According to the B.C. Municipal Act, a land-use contract becomes binding when it's signed by the mayor or the acting mayor. For a period of 30 days, according to the act, the Mayor may send a bylaw back to council for reconsideration.

And that's what Lane bases his hopes on. He said he doubts whether Savage or Christie will sign the contract. Pollen, when faced with "thousands of signatures from Victoria taxpayers," might return the bylaw for reconsideration, Lane said.

"Our people are canvassing the city. Others are standing on key corners in the downtown area, collecting signatures, while still others are mounting a telephone campaign.

Stolen Gas Has Punch

Two bright blue tanks of laughing gas have gone astray in Victoria — and police say it's no laughing matter; in fact, anyone who goofs with the tanks could be pretty blue about it.

Police said Thursday the tanks are filled with nitric oxide, which also is known as laughing gas and is lethal if used by persons unaware of proper handling methods.

The tanks, each four feet in diameter and 18 to 20 inches high, disappeared between 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and 8 a.m. Thursday from a Liquid Carbonic Co. truck parked on the lot of the Colony Motor Inn, 2852 Douglas. Tanks and contents are worth $95 each.

Also gone from the truck were two 50-pound boxes of copper-coated steel, each box being 36 inches by four inches by four inches and worth $35.

Police said information should be phoned to headquarters at 384-4111 and anyone who finds the missing goods should not touch them.

Tories To Fight 'Master of Masters'

"We'll be fighting the master of masters in political manoeuvering," B.C. Progressive Conservative leader Derril Warren told a packed house at the Gordon Head Recreation Centre Thursday night.

He told the audience of more than 200 the Social Credit party could be compared to an inverted pyramid. When the bottom rock goes the structure collapses.

"Where is the party when Bennett goes?" he asked.

Warren said he did not wish to detract from the good projects the Bennett government has completed during the past 20 years.

"But," he stressed, "it is time for a change."

Warren noted the labor unrest in the province and pointed out the present government's inability to cope with the current labor troubles.

"Strikes and lockouts to settle labor disputes are outmoded. The unions know this and so does management." He added that the government's Bill 33 which provides binding arbitration does not work.

He emphasized that a better method of settling labor disputes must be found.

Dr. Scott Wallace, MLA for Oak Bay also spoke saying the recent RCMP raids on construction union offices to seize files after being ordered by the attorney-general's office reminded him of the days of Hitler's book-burning campaigns.

Wallace told the meeting the Social Credit party demands loyalty to the party above everything else, and to disagree with the leader is considered as a form of "treason."

He emphasized the Conservatives were reviving provincially and nationally.

"Nationally the majority of Canadians are about as happy with Trudeau as I am about Bennett."

Ontario Report

Defective Products: Too Many Hit Market

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Law Reform Commission report tabled in the legislature deplored defective products and asked for tough new laws to ensure consumers get the protection warranties and guarantees promised them.

In a hefty two-volume report presented by Attorney-General Dalton Bales, the commission found manufacturers are allowing "an unacceptably high percentage of defective products" to reach the market.

And the commission called for a Consumer Products Warranties Act which would set warranty standards and do away with legal loopholes that enable manufacturers and vendors to evade their responsibilities.

The act, the commission suggested, would put teeth into the Consumer Protection Bureau's attempts to intercede on behalf of purchasers.

Commission chairman H. Allan Leal said the new act would be separate from the 80-year-old Sale of Goods Act, which the report found is no longer adequate to provide a fair balance of rights between vendor and consumer.

The automobile industry came under heavy fire in the report.

United States and Canadian studies of new-car buyers were cited which found many buyers dissatisfied with their purchases and with the service provided in accordance with warranties.

Louis Romero, a law teacher at the University of Saskatchewan, polled 600 buyers of 1971 Chevrolets, Fords and Plymouths in April, 1971, the report said.

Romero received replies from about half those he polled. One-fifth of the respondents were dissatisfied with their cars at that point.

Mechanical defects, squeaks and rattles were cited. Only 51 per cent of the buyers said the defects were corrected free of charge under the warranties, and almost half said the dealers tried but could not fix the defects.

The report also suggested there had been a decline in quality control in other industries.

In color-television sets there was "substantial evidence that color-television sets were prematurely marketed and that the consumer bore the brunt while the industry struggled to resolve technical difficulties."

Similarly, in some major household appliances such as washing machines, the report found a very high ratio of service calls listed as "product fault" calls.

'Wives Gain Little In Marriage'

LONDON (CP) — If a man wants to keep fit he should marry. Why? Because the care lavished on husbands by loving wives ensures his good health, says a report compiled by the National Federation of Business Women. It claims bachelors spend more time than married men in hospital beds. "However," the report concludes, "those who spend most time in hospitals are wives. They benefit little from marriage."

Governor of Tower Could Be a Woman

LONDON (Reuter) — Women civil servants in Britain have won a better chance to get top posts — such as the governorship of the Tower of London.

This and other posts previously considered suitable only for men will fall within the scope of women under a new government order. Positions likely to remain barred to women are those involving negotiations with Middle Eastern officials, who insist on working with men. And there are laws against women in mines or nuclear establishments.

Who Takes Cat to Vet?

Women—Classic Inheritors of All Odd Jobs

By KATHARINE WHITEHORN
Colonist Observer Service

LONDON — Did Metternich, one asks oneself, ever break off at the Congress of Vienna to persuade the Spanish ambassador that he wanted a ginger kitten? Did the day's session on the Madonna of the Rocks to get a birthday parcel to the post office on time? Did Palmerston Leonardo have to cut short ever have to hurry home from the Foreign Office because the builder was expected hourly? I doubt it.

All the arguments about women keeping up with men focus on the large areas — what they are going to do about their children, their temperament, the meals and cleaning. What no one allows for, and what really hobbles us in the race, is the incredible amount professional commitment can get you out of — not if you're a woman.

Take birthdays. A few men are good at birthdays, most not, but it's always the woman who finally has to remember the far-flung uncle, come up with some pretty paper and string, find the blasted card. And once you start adding the time taken to get child A organized to give a present to child B, and the cake and the party and the balloons, you can write off a couple of weeks a year for it. No way of streamlining it, either; you can bulk-buy cards and paper, I suppose, but you can hardly buy 30 breadbins for the whole crew—can't afford it, nowhere to keep them, and who knows what they'll want in September, anyway?

Or these wretched pets. All right, no one has to have kittens, as I keep telling the cat; but no matter whose animal it technically is, who ends up taking it to the vet to have its hernia fixed? (How does a kitten get a hernia, anyway—they don't lift many heavy weights.) However liberated the family, however the work is shared, no one ever seriously expects the man of the house to be the one to do something about the scaly patch on the back of the guinea-pig.

Anyone who comes to a house, too, is automatically supposed to be something the wife should have seen to. My husband's grievance of the week is having been roused in quick succession by a window-cleaner (who knows when a window-cleaner, any more than lightning, will strike?), a needy knife grinder and a man asking him to move the car because they were laying on a water supply for the vicar — and making about as much mess as if he were having it piped from the Jordan River. By what conceivable stretch of imagination is moving the car for the roadmen women's work? But you don't have to stretch your imagination; you just have to remember that women are the residual legatees of all odd jobs whatsoever.

This is the missing element in all those silly calculations where one journalist says that a woman's work is worth $1,000 at the going rate, and another says no it's not, not when you've deducted tax, stamp and payment for a man's work in the toolshed.

Another thing one never allows for is other people's troubles.

A friend rings you up because her daughter's on pot or her husband's left; you want to hear about it, you are all for the endless telephone calls, the come-round-at-once; but you forget, brutal though it sounds, that sympathy takes time as well as tea. And any woman who calmly opted out of that wouldn't be professional, she'd be plain inhuman.

And that goes, too for a lot of groups around the neighborhood. Men aren't bad at action groups, when there's a threat to property, but when it comes to sales of work, PTA, taking your patrol turn at the crossing, trudging round to see the aged — that's for the birds. And if you do maneuver your man into going, say, to hear about reading methods in the school, he comes back disgusted: he could have read all that in a book. All they really wanted him to do was partcipate; participation is the thief of time.

I'm not saying men can't be sympathetic — sometimes. They do feel a sense of local obligation — occasionally. But a man who opts out of helping of sick-visiting or thank-you letters gets away with it. I don't know why we so readily assunme men have a shallower sense of obligation — they are, after all, God's creatures—I'm not even sure it isn't vaguely insulting. But there it is: If something's got to be done, the chances are that it's a woman — and a busy one — who will sigh and do it.

Of course, women traditionally get stuck with much of this because they're supposed to have more time — or at least more flexible time, but these are the things you never get out of, even when you've no time at all. The only consolation is that in the long run we score: The person with too much to do always gains over the person with too little.

At least when a woman retires, in so far as she ever does, it's not the total cut-off that can leave a man with nothing to do all day but sit in front of the TV twiddling the knobs. And it's not that I mind wrapping parcels, or taking the clock to be mended, or those long slow hours at the vet's reading the sign saying will your bitch come on heat and spoil your plans?

Only I just wish, when neither of us has written to my husband's mother, I didn't feel so much worse about it than he does.

Weavers' Guild Chooses Slate

Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild, which claims to be the oldest weavers' guild in Canada and one of the most active, will be led by Mrs. Pamela Charlesworth in its year ahead.

The group has about 150 members in Greater Victoria, the Gulf Islands and other parts of southern Vancouver Island — and even has a member living in New Zealand. Many are interested in spinning as well as weaving.

Mrs. Charlesworth succeeds Mrs. Mickey Jossul. Others on the executive for resumption of activity in the fall are Mrs. Maedythe Martin, vice-president; Mrs. Margot Rainsford, secretary, and Mrs. Mabel Mitchell, treasurer.

Publicity chairman is Miss Marjorie Underwood, librarian Miss Jean Lorimer, membership chairman Mrs. Fran Ashwell, standards chairman Mrs. Joyce Harper, and threads chairman, Mrs. Jossul.

The guild will be sponsoring a two-day workshop in mid-July, on natural dyes and methods of applying natural dyes in weaving.

Artists' Style Changes Linked with Illnesses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lead poisoning and the eye disease called glaucoma are dreadful afflictions. But in a couple of cases at least, they may have enhanced mankind's cultural inheritance.

An article by staff writer Estie Stoll reports two latter-day medical diagnoses of maladies which changed the lives and styles of two great painters, Spain's Francisco Goya (1746-1828) and Holland's Vincent Van Gough (1853-1890).

Goya suffered from periodic spells of illness and depression which have popularly been ascribed to syphilis or schizophrenia or both.

His early paintings were pleasantly pastoral and elegant. Then, after bouts of illness which impaired his balance, hearing, speech, and vision, leaving him partially paralyzed, his artistic methods and subjects abruptly changed.

The change resulted in those paintings which earned Goya his title to greatness. They are bitter exposes of human cruelty and vice, painted with power and savagery.

Goya was partial to a pigment known as flake white, a poisonous leadcarbonate. He smeared it on his canvases with whatever was handy — sponges, rags, a trowel. He worked with great speed.

Dr. William G. Niekderland, clinical professor of psychiatry at the state university of New Yorks' Downstate Medical Centre in Brooklyn, thinks he knows what changed the Goya of the charming canvas The Parasol painted in 1777, to the Goya of the nightmarish Big Booby executed in 1810.

It was a plumbism, or lead poisoning, contracted from his tubs of flake white, Niekderland has compared Goya's symptoms with those of his own lead-poisoned patients and found a similar pattern of sickness — recovery — relapse.

Van Gogh at the time of his suicide in 1890 was, in the opinion of many current students of art, the most advanced of European painters.

His most vigorous paintings, and the ones most easily identified by laymen, are characterized by whirling halos surrounding any source of light, whether the sun or a lamp.

But in Van Gough's early paintings there are no such colored halos. Dr. Frederick W. Maire, medical director of the state Home and Training School in Wheat Ridge, Colo., believes the Dutch painter suffered from chronic glaucoma and that this malady distorted his perception of color and light.

Glaucoma victims often see halos around lights. If not treated, as it can be today, the disease eventually causes blindness. Van Gough wrote a painter friend, Paul Gauguin, that he had been forced to suspend work because his eyes were "strangely tired." This, too, is a symptom of glaucoma.

Van Gogh suffered from an emotional disorder. This is not disputed. But Maire speculates that ultimate awareness of his impending blindness may have triggered the intense depression that led to his suicide.

PROVISIONING the Pandora

No On
On Pa

Crew members aboard the Pandora are Jack Woodward, Murray Farmer, Stan Wilson of Vancouver, Bob's son, Ian, Ted Trenholme Ian Scott and Wally and Molly Meakes.

Crew members will fly back to Victoria after the race, all except the owner, his son and the Meakes. Gloria Horner with daughter, Wendy and Tom and Moira Harris will travel by air to join the Pandora in Maui and the party will cruise around the islands for the summer.

Bob Horner has lived in Victoria for five years and as he says "I'm virtually retired." He was a commercial pilot for 13 years and was also in the bus business before coming to Victoria.

Two new areas for summer activities have opened in Oak Bay this year at Henderson Park and Oak Bay high school as the Oak Bay Recreation Commission starts a new park program.

Five parks will open at 10 a.m. Tuesday for registration, and they will remain open from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday until the end of the summer.

Special activities will include soccer instruction at Uplands school starting July 3 at 9 a.m., and parks open regularly will be Henderson, Carnarvon, Windsor, and Quimper as well as Oak Bay high school.

There will also be a day camps at Elk Lake once a week for each park as well as tennis instruction at Carnarvon.

There will be no change for children registered at 10 a.m. July 4 at Carnarvon, Windsor or Quimper for the craft and games program, but charges will be made for materials for special craft such as ceramics, art, handcrafts and tie dyeing.

A similar program at Henderson will feature gymnastics in the new pavilion gymnasium and ethnic dancing weekly.

There will be games such as volleyball and floor hockey as well as gymnastics at the

Oak Bay Band Going Travelling

A bon voyage party will be held at the home of Sqdn.-Ldr. and Mrs. Clarence Goode, 1840 St. Ann, Oak Bay, Saturday afternoon. Their daughter, Diana, is leader of the band's clarinet section.

The band, which made a big impression in Japan at Expo 70 under the baton of David Dunnett is going on a tour of Britain and the continent during July and August.

Three tons of instruments will be conveyed by truck on the European travels which will take the band to Holland, France, Germany, Austria and Switzerland before it returns to London for a week's entertainment before the flight home in early August.

The trip was organized and financed by the Band Parents' Association in ticket sales, with each member paying their own expenses through personal effort and parents' help.

No One Going Hungry On Pandora's Journey

Dorothy Wrotnowski

"The winners always make it in 15 days," says Bob, who is entering the race for the first time.

Bob Horner has lived in Victoria for five years and as he says "I'm virtually retired." He was a commercial pilot for 13 years and was also in the bus business before coming to Victoria.

Each crew member is in charge of specific duties. Bob will look after medical supplies and will assist as navigator, Wally Meakes is chief navigator for the race and Murray Farmer is also detailed to navigation.

Jack Woodward is the sailing master — he has a sewing machine on board. Ian Scott will look after the safety equipment and Stan Wilson is the expert on equipment and tackle. Ted Trenholme is responsible for the rigging and young Ian Horner will assist Molly Meakes who will reign in the galley.

Wally and Molly Meakes have taken part in the race to Maui before; this will be their third trip. The first one was really stormy but the second one made up for it by smooth sailing all the way.

"But each trip you learn something more," says Molly who adds: "I love cooking; guess that is why I am here."

Molly is no stranger to cooking for a crowd. Her shore job is cooking dinners for 38 at the Pacific Centre.

Molly, who has lived all her life in Victoria, is organized to the hilt. All menus have been planned ahead and much of the food. Roasts have been cooked and gravy made, bread already mixed to be baked at sea, granola mixed to her own recipe — butter, brown sugar, wheat germ, coconut, sunflower and sesame seeds, all toasted and ready to be served as cereal.

"But that's not all we will have for breakfast. Every member of this crew likes to eat, so with 30 dozen eggs aboard it will be ham and bacon and eggs, pancakes, and so on.

"I've planned something different for every day," says Molly who has even got a Chinese dinner for one night. This will be chicken sweet and sour, chow mein and fried rice.

I went down to the Inner Harbor on Thursday morning. Everything looked so gay with the little pennants flying in the sharp breeze on the dressed ships.

Aboard the Pandora was much activity. Bob and Molly were stowing the foodstuffs. "I'll put the raisins here and the milk up there, Molly," said Bob. But the milk wouldn't fit, so down into the section of crackers and biscuits.

Talking about biscuits, I noticed a box filled with homemade cookies, mincemeat and other turnovers, all made by Molly.

Cheeses and different types of sausages, garlic, etc., were all going into their special places. "These are just for snacks," said Molly.

It is safe to wager that the crew of the Pandora will be eating as well as, if not better than, any other during the race which starts at 10:30 Saturday morning.

Platforms Daring To Be Funny

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

NEW YORK — For years, I have to confess, I've been having a hate affair with platform shoes. I was mildly antagonistic when I first saw them in Italy long ago and outraged when Saint Laurent showed them in Paris. I've called them hideous, freakish and just plain ugly. I didn't mince words, but now it turns out that I simply hadn't met the right platform.

When you meet the right platform, something electric happens. You stand up two inches taller and your legs feel like Marlene Dietrich's.

It's a break for the average woman who is still a mere five-foot five, but even the girls who are pushing six feet seem to like the extra lift and, as for legs, nobody's can be too long these days.

"I feel like a different person. My whole posture has changed. I don't walk with my head stuck forward any more," says Gerry Stutz Gibbs, president of the Henri Bendel, who has been wearing Jerry Miller's platform soles since the fashion began to catch on.

"I like to walk in them. They give me a wonderful balance," Mrs. William Fine says. She goes all the way with Charles Jourdan's platforms which are at least a couple of inches deep and are married to high heels.

As far as I can remember, the first platforms and heavy clog type shoes turned up in a show of Indiana-born Ken Scott's fashions at the Pitti Palace in Florence. Nobody thought he was serious, but how wrong they were. Later platforms came on strong as part of the 1940s revival.

Europeans took to platforms more than a year ago and most of the imports come in that way. Young magazines and papers are full of them, and actress-model Marisa Berenson appears in platforms and five-inch heels. Most of the ladies, though, are still wearing the status shoe of several years ago. According to Saks Fifth Avenue, it's that neat little low-heeled number with the buckle across the toe.

Actual memories of the '40s look have made many a woman shudder from platforms, but the new versions aren't revivals at all. They may provide the same comfort, but they are much more fanciful or even outlandish, if you like.

They dare to be funny in a world of fashion that has been fairly lugubrious right down the line recently.

The thing is to find the right platform. The wrong one can be a disaster, and I still say it's ugly.

Beth Levine's wedge soles have already won over the opposition. For those who like to step into a new look gradually, Edward Rayne of London has designed for Delman a buckled town shoe with just a whisper of a platform, but it's still there. David Evins has given in to a slightly higher version.

It's obvious that the French ladies love the lift. The Dior platforms at Bergdorf Goodman also kick up black and white striped heels, and Vivier's at Saks Fifth Avenue go to extremes of height at sole and heel.

For those who would rather dive right in than step gradually, Jourdan is the one. The whole collection, straight from Paris, is fresh, original and stylish-plus. The shoes do something for the routineness of pants and look just as amusing below short skirts, where they provide a good balance.

The Jourdan shoes all have snub toes, and the short vamp on a stilt-like sole and heel gives the look of a small, very feminine foot cradled in an amusing cocoon. Many of the shoes use two colors, like the classic spectators, but different. Others wear a second color in stripes to separate top from sole. Among the most spectacular are the shoes with zippered-up tops and soles of thick crepe rubber, the cork clogs made originally for Ungaro in Paris and the black silk party shoes with glitter platforms and heels. The prices are from $32 to $110.

There hasn't been such an amusing accessory since mad hats went out of fashion. In the end, of course, platforms may laugh themselves out of existence, but it won't be for quite a while.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann: I was fascinated by that very candid letter from the woman who wanted to know if prostitution is legal in Nevada. I was surprised to learn that it is, in some counties.

Since the woman who wrote did so in good faith and you answered her graciously, I'd like to make some comparisons that might be helpful to anyone who is considering the oldest profession.

Like a doctor, she will be on call 24 hours a day.

Like a ballplayer, her productivity will be limited to a few years.

Like an insurance salesman, she will have to split her commission with an agent.

Like a mailman, she will be expected to work regardless of the weather.

I'll bet your readers could add to the list and come up with some dillies. Will you print them if they do?—Chicago

Dear Chic: Probably not. But thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: There's another side of the story beside the one expressed by the young widow who married a man with three "impossible brats."

Ten years ago I married a widower with five children. I had two of my own. My husband's brood ranged from 14 to six. When I married their father, these children were stealing, smoking pot and having trouble with teachers and neighbors. They were rebellious and disrespectful. Deep down I knew why. They had been deprived of a mother for most of their lives and they were bitter and undisciplined.

Within a week after I married and moved into our new home with my two youngsters, one of my step-daughters told me she hated me because I had married her father "for his money." Another step-daughter broke my little boy's nose. The ten-year-old stole $15 from my purse. The six-year-old set fire to the garage.

I was determined to conquer the situation with love and understanding. The first thing I did was call a family meeting and lay down rules. The children acted mad but they really loved it. No one had ever set limits for them and they viewed my toughness as a sign that I cared. From then on it was a matter of keeping my word, serving as referee, counselor and above all, a loving presence.

Today these children are good citizens, good students, and I am immensely proud of them. My husband calls me the Miracle Worker. I say the change in their lives was no miracle; it was the natural by-product of love.—Cleveland Mom

The following is of interest only as a parallel between the workings of government in Canada and the U.S. and is not intended as criticism or praise of the systems in either country:

In Canada, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, an agency appointed entirely by government, acted in 1970 on what it viewed as a mandate from government and told community cable-TV organizations they should provide local programming. Nobody went to court; everyone obeyed.

In the U.S., the Federal Communications Commission said in 1971 community cable-TV groups should provide local programming. Some went to court and now the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled the FCC was right.

The vote in the CRTC was unanimous while the vote in the U.S. Supreme Court was 5-4.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer—The piece of music entitled Capriccio Italienne was, like Capriccio Espagnole, written by a Russian. But by a different Russian: Tchaikovsky, not Rimsky-Korsakov. Tchaikovsky also wrote Romeo and Juliet but they didn't answer.

Today's question—Since the holiday means no question Saturday this is a weekend toughie and for fellow sports nuts. There were seven games in the 1971-72 National Football League playoffs. You supply who beat who, plus the score of the Superbowl game. Answers Tuesday.

Friday Highlights

C 8:00 p.m.—Laugh-In's rerun features actress Jo Ann Pflug—2, 6.

C 9:30—Look and Live: an hour religious special—11.

Friday Movies

9:30 a.m.—Young Philadelphians (dreadful 1959 high-society stuff, part two), Paul Newman, Robert Vaughn. Little better than it was Thursday—4.

C 4:00 p.m.—Gunpoint (1966 Audie Murphy action)—7.

C 7:00—Hell and High Water (low-interest 1954 submarine action), Richard Widmark, Cameron Mitchell, many more. It shows its age—7.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

TEAM CAPTAIN

The duplicate player who watches a good declarer play rubber bridge is sometimes bewildered by what he sees. It is not until the hand is over and a successful contract scored that the duplicate player realizes what happened. And then only if he thinks about it.

Today's game hand is an interesting example of the difference between routine play and hopes for overtricks as opposed to the best chance to land the contract without regard for overtricks. The hand was played successfully by Al Evans of Sherman Oaks, Calif.

Vulnerable: Both
Dealer: South

♥ Q 3
♦ 6 4 3 2

WEST
♠ 10 7 5 2
♥ A K J 9
♦ K 10 5

EAST
♥ 10 8 6 5
♦ J 9 8 7

SOUTH
♠ A Q J 8 6
♥ 7 4 2
♦ A Q
♣ 7 6 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	All pass

Opening lead: King of hearts.

North made a good decision when he raised South's two-spade rebid to game. A no-trump game would have had no chance, since both key finesses were offside.

After West's lead of the heart king he correctly analyzed that his best chance to defeat the hand was to prevent a heart ruff in dummy. Accordingly, he led a trump at trick two.

The routine play which could also yield some overtricks is to win the trump king, draw trumps and then take the club finesse. If everything goes fine, with both minor suit finesses working, declarer would end up making not only his contract but two overtricks as well.

However, this line of play loses the contract for when East wins the club queen, the defence take two more heart tricks for down one.

Al Evans was not concerned with overtricks and routine play and made the hand as follows. He won the trump switch with dummy's king, but instead of drawing trumps and trying for as many tricks as possible in the minor suits, he made the unusual but effective pay of a low club away from the A-K-J.

East won the trick in surprise but the hand could no longer be defeated. A small trump remained in dummy to guard against two more heart losers so East shifted to diamonds.

Declarer won the ace and after drawing trumps and playing a high club, he was sure of his 10 tricks — five trumps, four clubs and one diamond.

Unusual play? Yes, but very effective. A good example of the greater importance of making the contract instead of trying for an overtrick. Also a good illustration of rubber-bridge strategy as compared to duplicate play.

340 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

ON THE WATERFRONT
This up-Island property is extremely profitable for the present owner. It should be even more so for a really aggressive group of new owners willing to expand both the season and the facilities. 51 trailer pads, 4 unit motel, a four-room house on (get this point please) 6 acres of land having 626 feet of waterfront including 100 ft of foreshore rights with marine way "small boat" launching apparatus, tackle sales shop, 5 boats (rentals), 3 trailers (rented). Many guests have been visitors for 12 years and come from far afield with their trailers on a seasonal basis. Others live all the year round in the trailer park. And so important, the property has frontage on BOTH sides of the Island Highway. How about building a motel? Generous terms to qualified buyer, about $65,000 down payment required. Inspection by appointment and details from JOHN RUSSELL, 386-2955 or res. 592-3248. Mayfair Realty.

10-UNIT
WATERFRONT MOTEL
To our knowledge, this is the only motel on the strait of Georgia that borders on its own beach. HALF ACRE OF PARADISE WITH GORGEOUS VIEWS OF Mt. Baker. Its location in the Sidney area offers waterfront privacy and yet is on a good tourist route (very accessible, close to shopping, ferries, etc.) this package comes complete with a modern 3-bedroom home. Other business interests forces the sale. $120,000 with good terms (possible trades). Be in time for the summer tourist trade!! Contact Terry Eden or Harry Wright (382-2157) anytime

Square One for Gold River

Hard-Won Medic Leaving Village

By BETTY MacMILLAN
Colonist Correspondent

GOLD RIVER — This west coast Island community again faces the problem of having no doctor — less than one year after a medic set up practice here following a six-week plea by the community for medical services.

Dr. Edward Mulligan, who came from Sackville, New Brunswick last September, has announced he will be leaving Gold River for Woodstock, Va., July 15.

His announcement coincides with a disclosure by the chairman of the community's health and welfare commiteee that a contract in the neighborhood of $80,000 has been let for construction of a long-sought medical diagnostic treatment centre.

The contract, said Mrs. Mae Stewart, was awarded by the Comox-Strathcona Regional District to Turner Construction Ltd. of Port Alberni.

The centre, she said, will include a three-bed holding clinic for patients awaiting transfer 57 miles to hospital at Campbell River; facilities for a public health nurse, visiting dentist and optometrist.

The centre will be located on Trumpet Drive behind the 2,000-resident village's only shopping plaza.

Mulligan said he is leaving the community for personal, family and business reasons.

Mulligan
. . . goes July 15

He said one of the biggest hardships a physician has to face in a community such as Gold River is lack of a hospital where it is possible to keep up to date with medical advances and techniques.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons has been advised, he said, but he could not speculate on how many — if any — doctors might be available to replace him when he leaves.

"The area would probably be suited best to an older physician — possibly someone who is semi-retired," he said.

With the health clinic on the horizon, it might be easier now to attract a doctor, he added.

Mrs. Stewart said the village will be sorry to see Mulligan go and that it will be difficult to replace him.

Mulligan took his medical training in Dublin, Ireland. He interned in Dublin and Norfolk, Va., where he set up a resident family practice for two years before settling in New Brunswick in November 1970.

He is married and has a three-year-old son.

Gold River went six weeks without a doctor before Mulligan came — after the village's previous doctor retired because of health reasons.

Residents of the village urged Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at that time to use power granted him to appoint a doctor for the village. An order-in-council passed in July of last year gave Loffmark the power to grant, deny or control a doctor's right to practice in a particular hospital.

However, Dr. W. G. McClure, registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, said at that time the order did not give the minister power to send doctors where he wanted them.

Since then the cabinet order has been amended somewhat, to soften the power.

Lydia Spreads Wings for Greece

NANAIMO — Lydia Del Rio Turino, the Cuban stowaway who won the hearts of the Nanaimo community — and subsequently Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey who gave her permission to stay in Canada — left Vancouver for Greece this week.

Lydia, a Cuban citizen, was found aboard the Cyprus registered freighter Dorine Papalios when it docked in Nanaimo Feb. 8.

Nanaimo "adopted" the girl — who told tales of religious persecution and other Cuban restrictions — and Mackasey took a personal interest in the case and arranged landed immigrant status for her on "humanitarian" grounds.

Later, in the spring, she disclosed she was married to a Greek seaman who had been working aboard the freighter at the time of her defection from Cuba. She then applied for permission to leave Canada and join her husband in Greece.

Harry Miller, immigration officer in Nanaimo, confirmed Thursday that permission had been granted and that the girl had left by air Monday of this week.

Saanich Club Whips Rivals

Saanich E. J. Hunter got better as the game progressed Thursday night to defeat Victoria McDonald's, 15-6, in a B.C. Junior "B" Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena.

Saanich took a 3-2 lead after the opening period, increased it to 8-3 by the end of the second and outscored the losers, 7-3, in the final 20 minutes.

Ramos Fails Drug Test

MADRID (AP) — Mando Ramos of Los Angeles, newly crowned lightweight champion of the World Boxing Council, failed a post-fight dope test and may be deprived of his title, the Spanish Boxing Federation announced Thursday night.

After the fight, Ramos and Carrasco took urine tests before a team of doctors from the Spanish federation.

The result of the test was given to Jose Suleiman, secretary general of the WBC, who said the WBC would decide what action to take against Ramos.

The result of Carrasco's test was not disclosed.

Bombing Hoax Clears Bank

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 200 people were evacuated from the first two storeys of the Toronto-Dominion Bank building in downtown Vancouver Thursday following a bomb threat and extortion attempt. Police said a woman demanding $250,000 telephoned the bank on the ground floor of the building and said a bomb would go off there if the money were not paid. The bank did not pay the money, and a police search found no sign of a bomb.

Regional Board To Fight

Gulf Island Airstrip Still Opposed

The Capital Regional Board has decided to fight construction of a private airstrip on Salt Spring Island in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Following a meeting behind closed doors Wednesday, the regional board instructed its lawyers to take the case to the Supreme Court.

A preliminary injunction was issued against West Ganges Holdings Ltd. on May 24, but one week later, Mr. Justice M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake declared the regional board's application for an extension of the injunction invalid.

The airstrip in question is 40 feet wide and 2,000 feet long. The area in which it is located, is zoned agricultural — which includes recreational uses.

Treat To Beat Heat

These Ottawa youngsters have found way to beat capital's sticky heat—by leaping from Prince of Wales railway bridge into Ottawa River. Boyish enthusiasm solved heat problem, but there might be some repercussions if Mom or Dad happened along, or if they swallowed some water.

King Fisherman

Bates Beach Tyee Still Tops

After two months of fishing in the King Fisherman Contest this year, the fish to beat are a 52-pound spring (chinook) salmon caught by Jack Thomson on June 24 at Beechey Head, using anchovy; a 31.3-pound tyee caught by Dave Blamire on June 18 at Bates Beach with a plug; and a 9.9-pound coho caught by Dan Bell on June 21 at Bates Beach with a Rex Field plug.

In the freshwater categories the fish to beat are a 10.12-pound trout caught by Tod Noble at Lake Cowichan on May 27 with a Number 4 Tom Mack spoon; a six-pound bass caught by Ron Ebbs-Canavan at Beaver Lake on May 18 with a Flatfish; a 15-pound steelhead caught by Gordon Herbertson in Nahmint River on April 30, using roe; and a 5.13-pound brown trout caught by Douglas Cunningham at Cowichan River on April 29 with worm.

Saturday sees the start of another month which brings another round of Prince Buttons and hidden weight prizes.

Latest King Fisherman entries:

FIRST TYEE of year to be entered was this 31.3-pound tyee taken at Bates Beach on home-made broom-handle plug by Dave Blamire of Courtenay.

Firm Consolidating In Okanagan Valley

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. announced Thursday a $25 million dollar consolidation program in the Okanagan Valley that will mean the closing of three limber mills and the expansion of three others.

President Robert Rogers said the program would create up to 400 new construction jobs in the Okanagan area over the next 18 months. There would be about 55 fewer mill jobs, but this was expected to be offset by an increase in logging jobs.

"We will schedule old mill closures to co-incide with startup of our new facilities, so our employees will have the opportunity to transfer to new jobs," said Richard Carlson, general manager for the Okanagan operations of Crown Zellerbach.

Rogers said $12 million would be spent at Armstrong, for a new sawmill and planer mill and expansion of a plywood plant. A similar expansion program at Kelowna would cost $10 million, and $3 million would be spent at Lumby for a new planer mill and modifications to a sawmill.

He said lumber mills at Enderby, Falkland and Monte Lake would be closed.

William Beaton, vice-president for building materials, said most of the new production equipment would be bought in Canada. He said plywood and lumber production was expected to increase about 50 per cent because of the modernization program, scheduled for completion in 1974.

Rogers said the program was made necessary because of new provincial timber harvesting standards, which require operators to remove and process logs down to four inches in diameter at the top, and to meet environmental control regulations for the region.

He said the mills being closed could not meet the new standards.

Postal Walkout First Skirmish

OTTAWA (CP) — Union opposition to a new classification of postal workers has upset previously quiet contract negotiations.

The first skirmish in 1972 postal bargaining occurred last week when about 200 mail sorters in Ottawa staged a wildcat strike protesting the reclassification.

The department plans to hire mail-sorting machine operators at a salary level lower than the minimum now paid to letter sorters.

Installations of new mail-sorting machines at the main depot here was the first mechanization of a job previously done manually in 15 major centres.

Although the employees returned to work when the union requested, indications are the situation may be building toward Canada's third mail strike since 1968.

Negotiations for a new contract have been going on since February. The contract expired in March.

"We had high hopes this year would be the year without the strike, but the new equipment issue has thrown a real monkey-wrench in the works," James McCall said Wednesday. He is president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, which represents letter sorters.

Post office assurances that no employees will lose pay or jobs and that there will be no red circling of existing employees operating the machines have not satisfied the unions. The department says jobs will be ended through attrition — not refilling positions that become vacant.

Red circling means an employee who needs lesser skills for a new position retains his previous income, but has smaller chance of getting an increase.

Post office spokesmen also say reclassification of present employees is not intended, but admit the machine operators will fill new positions at salaries lower than the present minimum.

CPR Bids On Hearing

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Rail has asked for another hearing by the Canadian Transport Commission on the Kootenay and Elk Railway's controversial plan to move coal from eastern British Columbia through the U.S. to the Roberts Bank Superport.

The scheme would involve the interchange of traffic between Kootenay and Elk and the U.S. company Burlington Northern, and would provide competition for CP Rail, which now hauls the coal to the coast. It was turned down by the CTC last year, but the Supreme Court of Canada said last month that the CTC had erred in a point of law.

Bobby Wants More

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Bobby Fischer has made a last-minute demand for more money to play in Sunday's world chess championship against Russian Boris Spassky, informed sources said Thursday.

They reported that the 29-year-old American challenger sent an ultimatum to the Iceland Chess Federation "two or three days ago" saying he would not show up unless he got 30 per cent of the gate receipts as well as the unprecedented sums already guaranteed.

Under the agreement Fischer and Spassky signed, the players will share a purse of $125,000, with the winner getting five-eighths of it. In addition it was agreed that they would each get 30 per cent of receipts from sales of television and film rights for the match. Fischer still hasn't shown up.

GOP Goal Miami Strife?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Antiwar activist Rennie Davis said Thursday there were "some indications" the Nixon administration wants "to create another Chicago" at Miami Beach next month to embarrass the Democrats and justify banning demonstrations during the GOP convention in August.

Davis, one of the Chicago Seven accused of causing trouble at the 1968 Democratic convention and an organizer of protest plans for both party meetings at Miami Beach this year, said disruption was not the goal of the demonstrators.

Rhodo Ills

During the first half of the present century, rhododendrons and azaleas could be grown in all the coastal sections of British Columbia with almost complete freedom from disease or pest damage.

Gradually, though, since about 1950, rhododendron afflictions have been on the increase. I suppose the reason is the increased popularity of these lovely shrubs, and with the importing of new varieties, we have also imported the parasites, infections and natural enemies of the rhododendron tribe.

One of the most common of these troubles is a fungus infection known as Bud Blast, and the first symptoms to be noticed are blossom buds that fail to open. If these reluctant buds are examined closely, they are found to be brown to grey in color, and a magnifying glass will reveal tiny black-knobbed hair-like stalks growing on the surface of the bud. These contain the infecting spores of the fungus.

Like cancer in humans, this trouble is not too difficult to deal with if it is diagnosed and treated in its very early stages. And again as with cancer, prompt and drastic surgery is the answer to this threat.

The spread of the infection usually takes place in July and August when the disease spores are released — in much the same way as when a seed pod scatters its seeds — to infect new terminal blossom buds and leaf buds, not only on your own plants, but on the rhododendrons in other people's gardens too.

If your sick plant cannot infect others until July, it follows then that if all unopened buds on spring-blooming rhododendrons are cut away and burnt before Dominion Day, the disease can be stopped dead in its tracks. It is a sound precaution, after pruning, to spray thoroughly with a good fungicide.

Spots and blotches on the leaves are not necessarily caused by disease — poor root action due to uncongenial conditions can mar the leaves — but there are several fungus infections that betray their presence first on the leaves.

Brown spots with greyish-white centres are symptoms of a disease known as Pestalotia, while another fungus, Lophodermium, causes larger silvery-grey areas with reddish margins. Fortunately, both diseases can be controlled quite effectively by the prompt removal and burning of the affected leaves.

The key word here is, of course, "prompt", and so few gardeners can be induced to take the immediate action so necessary to prevent the spread of infection.

We sit around hoping the trouble will go away of its own accord, which it never does. And in the meantime the tiny fungus "plants" are proliferating on the diseased leaves and buds, casting forth their airborne disease spores to infect other parts of the plant and other plants in other gardens.

One hard lesson I had to learn very early in my gardening career is this: A sick leaf never gets any better. A brown spot on a leaf will never go away — it can only spread or get bigger. And even if the disease could be halted dead in its tracks, the blemish on the leaf will persist as long as that leaf lives, like the pock marks of smallpox.

If this basic fact is kept firmly in mind — a marred leaf never makes a comeback — you'll find it a lot easier to harden your heart and deal firmly — and promptly — with plant diseases in their early stages. This applies not only to rhododendrons but to all manner of outdoor and indoor plants.

Stamp Out Frontons

Protest is an angry sea that breaks on every shore these days, and the latest wave has crashed on Langley, a village on Whidbey Island, in Puget Sound.

Apparently the trouble at Langley was overlooked by the major wire services, so I am indebted for my knowledge of it to a Dr. J. R. E. Morden.

He sent me an account of the Langley march, written on the spot and in the heat of the moment, evidently, by Loye Minor, a correspondent for the Vancouver (Wash.) Herald. His graphic account, clipped from the Vancouver paper, begins as follows:

"LANGLEY — Apathy ran rampant and boredom was unrestrained in downtown Langley Saturday afternoon as some of the local citizenry held the first protest march in the history of this tiny Whidbey Island town . . ."

The story has the ring of accuracy, as well as compassion and interpretive depth.

"The march consisted of 12 persons from a local commune, four dogs and two small children. They walked around the block twice and then sat on the curb smoking their own brand of unfiltered cigarettes . . ."

Minor observes that there was much disagreement as to what was being protested, and blames this on the fact that the lettering on the signs the marchers carried was smudged and the spelling was uncertain.

One well-executed sign, however, clearly said stamp out frontons, which only added to the confusion, since none of the locals were immediately sure what a fronton might be.

Minor himself, the thorough reporter, looked fronton up in his dictionary and found that it could be either a court on which the Mexican game of jai alai is played, or a tropical fruit.

No frontons of either kind were known to exist in Langley at the moment, but it was suggested that perhaps one could be obtained and stamped out, if such an act would appease the marchers.

Some of the signs appeared to express disapproval of the Vietnam war, although one marcher carried a Viet Cong flag, according to Minor, and this was taken locally as approval of the Viet Cong war.

Overlooking no detail, Minor noted that "the two dogs carried rabies 72 tags around their necks and the two children carried red lollipops." (There is a discrepancy here, Minor having earlier reported the presence of four dogs.)

On the surface, that's all there was to it. But Minor dug deeper, looking for causes and lessons.

"An event of this nature, stirring up the unbridled unconcern that it did, must have an explanation.

"Possibly it can be found in the pleasant failure of police commissioner Ric Capps to panic. His calm good humor did much to spoil the entire event."

With the local forces of repression indulging in such restraint, the demonstrators were unable to claim that they had been provoked, and had to resolve the major crisis of the demonstration by themselves.

"At the end of the parade there was a suggestion that in the absence of draft cards the protestors might burn food stamps or even welfare cheques, but this was vetoed by cooler heads and the protest died away."

The march ended without arrests. But certain members of the community chose to retaliate in more subtle ways. "Norm Desdier, owner of the local tavern," said Minor in concluding his report, "has refused to serve beer to the two people carrying the Viet Cong flag."

It is perhaps too early to say what the long-term results of this march will be. Though the marchers appear to have failed in their immediate objectives, the end of the Vietnam war and the abolition of frontons, one may not say at this point that their message has been wasted. In any case, two things are clear:

Violence may be averted if the police retain their calm good humor and fail pleasantly to panic.

And it's going to be a dry summer in Langley for those who carry the Viet Cong flag.

Unique, Unique

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Jim Nabors tossed a party for comedienne Joan Rivers and her husband Edgar Rosenberg the other night that had something unique even for Bel-Air — 45 minutes of chamber music. Believe it or not, it went over big. Nabors' 32-room mansion in Bel-Air has something else unique — everything including the house itself is paid for. The singer-comedian is seldom home long enough to entertain, but when he does, it's first cabin all the way. One of the town's fancier French restaurants — St. Germaine — catered the sit-down dinner for 120. Few people know that Jim is such a gourmet that he can taste a wine and tell who jumped on the grapes. His house, tastefully furnished, drew sighs from the star-studded guest list. One wag — Frank Wag, to be exact — asked Jim when the prices changed.

Among the guests were Jane Wyman, the Steve Allens, Eva Gabor, Suzanne Pleshette and her husband Tommy Gallagher, composer Jerry (Hello, Dolly!) Herman, Ross Hunter with Nancy Sinatra, Carol Burnett, Connie Stevens, Vicki Carr, Doc Severinsen, Kay Starr, Jackie De Shannon and next-door neighbor, Mrs. Carlotta Kirkby. It was her house which was used for years as the home of The Beverly Hillbillies. Doc Severinsen flipped over the chamber music — four greying musicians and a girl violinist. Doc was wearing an outfit he tore off Liberace's back.

Richard Castellano, who was nominated for an Oscar in his first movie and was costarred in The Godfather tried to open an account — not cash a cheque — in a bank the other day. You won't believe what happened. He's living out here while making The Super, and was walking around town with a couple of hefty paycheques from Metromedia.

They were drawn on a local bank so he went to a branch of the bank to open the account. But Richard doesn't drive so he had no driver's license. The branch wouldn't accept his cheque without a driver's license. Richard then went next door and bought a copy of TV Guide which had his picture on the cover. Even that wouldn't satisfy the teller. Finally, Richard called a Metromedia boss who convinced the bank to take Castellano's money. Richard said too many people take The Godfather seriously. "They actually think I am Clemenza."

B.C. Alters Film Censor Titles

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of the provincial legislature's special committee on classification of motion pictures has announced the initiation of a new film classification system.

Burt Campbell, Social Credit member for Revelstoke-Slocan, said, effective this weekend, films of a general nature will carry that classification in all advertisements, and the term "mature entertainment" will replace "adult entertainment."

The system of placing "warnings" in advertisements of a mature or restricted categories will continue, and film classification director Gay MacDonald will insert special warnings in general films if he feels they contain something possibly objectionable to children.

CBC To Have New Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC has received the go-ahead from the federal government for construction of a $10.6-million regional broadcasting centre in Vancouver.

The CBC announced this week that Treasury Board has approved a contract between the CBC and Foundation Co. of Canada Ltd.

The new centre to be completed in 1974, will be opposite the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse, on the block enclosed by Georgia, Cambie, Robson and Hamilton streets.

The CBC said its present facilities "consist largely of a former garage and automobile showroom, purchased and converted in 1953-1954 as a 'temporary' measure."

Gould's 'Pick Up' Costly

LOS ANGELES — Actor Elliott Gould Thursday was ordered to pay $6,501 in damages to a Hollywood freelance photographer he said he "picked up and put aside" but did not strike.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Parks Stillwell granted the photographer, Anthony Rizzo, 25, damages for medical expenses and loss of earnings plus $2,000 in punitive damages.

The judge dismissed Rizzo's claim against actress Barbra Streisand, who was married to Gould when the 1968 incident occurred.

Rizzo, who had sought $200,000 damages in the civil battery suit, testified earlier that Gould grabbed him by the neckstrap of his camera, hit him and bounced him against a car parked outside the Director's Guild Theatre here.

"I never struck or hit him in any way," Gould said in the non-jury trial. "I was very careful to put him down as gently as I could."

Gould said Rizzo did, however, come in contact with the car. "I leaned him against it," he said. "I wanted to make sure he didn't fall down."

The incident, Gould said, took place as he and Miss Streisand were leaving the theatre.

Death Ruling

Soaring Hopes For Many

By UPI

The U.S. Supreme Court's fateful decision on the death penalty Thursday brought soaring hopes to such notorious condemned persons as Richard Speck, Duane Earl Pope, Fred (Ahmed) Evans and Denniss Whitney.

California's famous convicted killers — Sirhan Sirhan, Charles Manson and his cult John Linley Frazier — already were off Death Row on the basis of a state supreme court decision banning executions in that state.

Paul Gilly and Aubran Martin, who faced the death penalty following their conviction in the slayings of United Mine Workers official Joseph Yablonski and his wife and daughter, also were among those affected by the court's ruling that the death penalty is forbidden by the Constitution.

But the question appeared moot at this point in their case because Pennsylvania Governor Milton Shapp had already sworn to reprieve all sentenced to death in the state as long as he holds office.

The historic decision that spared the lives of some 600 condemned persons came when the supreme court ruled by a 5-4 margin that the death penalty is "cruel and unusual punishment" and that it is also forbidden by the U.S. Constitution.

The full legal impact of the momentous decision made in Washington, D.C., was not clear-cut, however, because the five-member majority produced five separate opinions and failed to agree completely that capital punishment would be unconstitutional under all circumstances.

Chief Justice Warren Burger expressed belief in a dissent that the death sentence might be permissible if strict standards were spelled out for judges and juries in imposing it.

The four Nixon-appointed justices led by Burger dissented, but they, too, filed individual views — making nine opinions in all.

The court as a whole spoke in an unsigned, brief opinion which said in three test cases: "The court holds that the imposition and carrying out of the death penalty in these cases constitutes cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the eighth and fourteenth amendments."

The immediate result is that 598 men and 2 women on condemned rows in 31 states and the District of Columbia can have their death sentences nullified with prison terms substituted instead.

Differences Inhibiting India Talks

SIMLA, India (UPI) — Apparently serious differences prevented a formal meeting Thursday between Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and Pakistani President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto in their summit conference here. A Pakistan spokesman said the talks were "in a very critical stage."

The two leaders, however, saw each other socially Thursday night at a dinner given by Mrs. Gandhi.

The hitch developed as the official delegations met Thursday morning to arrange the second face-to-face meeting of the two heads of state.

Officials on both sides said that basically the problem is that the Indian side wants to discuss a broad package deal and the Pakistani delegation wants to take up the issues one by one.

Unkempt Donor Gives $1,891

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — An unkempt young man walked into a Church of Christ Bible school in a Sydney suburb and handed an envelope containing $1,891 to Pam Rosser, saying: "Here, give this to God." After she took the money, the man ran to a car and drove off. Miss Rosser said the donation would be used by the Bible school.

Just what did the Supreme Court of Canada mean Thursday when it ruled a motorist has a right to speak to his lawyer before agreeing to take a breath analysis test?

Police forces in Greater Victoria weren't sure and were awaiting instructions from the provincial attorney-general's department before making major changes in procedure.

The attorney-general's department, in turn, was awaiting clarification from Ottawa

Chichester:

'I Am Weak, Cold'

LONDON (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, Britain's lone round-the-world mariner who has been competing in the transatlantic singlehanded yacht race, was reported Thursday night to be in trouble as he sailed Gipsy Moth V back towards home.

"I am weak and cold," the ailing 70-year-old Chichester signalled by lamp to a Royal Air Force Nimrod search aircraft.

Chichester flashed his message twice to the aircraft, which has been tracking his progress since he was first sighted Tuesday after not being heard from for 11 days.

Chichester, who defied doctors' orders to tackle the marathon ocean crossing, has dropped out of the race. He is believed to be heading for the French coast. One of his messages to the Nimrod said he hoped his son would meet him in Brest.

'Visible Bruises from

Navy Vet

DETROIT (UPI) — A 28-year-old jobless navy veteran was charged Thursday with air piracy as the hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner over Indiana Saturday with $502,000 in ransom.

Martin Joseph McNally had $12 in his possession when FBI agents arrested him late Wednesday night near his home in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb about 150 miles from Peru, Ind., where the ransom money was found in a soybean field Monday.

McNally bore "visible bruises" on his arm, leg, thigh, wrist and face — "probably, from parachute straps," Neil Welch, special agent in charge of the Detroit FBI office, said.

B.C. Awaits Word With Bated Breath

- Breath test laws still workable, says Lang. Page 3

Just what did the Supreme Court of Canada mean Thursday when it ruled a motorist has a right to speak to his lawyer before agreeing to take a breath analysis test?

Police forces in Greater Victoria weren't sure and were awaiting instructions from the provincial attorney-general's department before making major changes in procedure.

The attorney-general's department, in turn, was awaiting clarification from Ottawa and legal sources predicted it might be a day or two before it would be known if Canada's official breath-analysis machine for suspected drinking drivers is useful or not.

The key question facing police is whether the highest court's ruling that a motorist can speak to his lawyer means over the telephone or face to face.

In Victoria, Police Chief John Gregory said there would really be no change in procedure if it meant only over the telephone. He pointed out all accused have the right to make a phone call and that could be to a lawyer.

But Canadian courts will not accept breath-analysis machine results if they are taken more than two hours after the incident that caused

Curtis
. . . tangle with Anderson?

He'll Seek Tisdalle Seat

Tory Tag for Curtis

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis will announce this morning that he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the provincial riding of Saanich and the Islands.

The formal announcement of his candidacy will be made by Curtis and B.C. Conservative leader Derril Warren at a news conference scheduled for 10 a.m. today.

Curtis' decision to run for the Tories in Saanich-Islands raises the prospect of a head-on clash between Liberals and Conservatives in the riding with indications that B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson may also choose to run there.

Malcolm Anderson, president of the Saanich Liberal Association, said Thursday a provincial candidate would be nominated July 10 and he told reporters he has been pressing his brother David to run in this riding.

"As president I want David to seek the nomination in Saanich and I've been pressing him to run," Anderson said. David Anderson will make his final decision known at a news conference tentatively scheduled for the Red Lion Inn, in Saanich, one week from today.

In 1969, the Liberals ran a poor third in Saanich and the Islands, tallying only roughly one-third of the votes gained by Socred John Tisdale. The Conservatives didn't run a candidate in the riding in the last election.

This time, however, Tisdalle, who previously had won the seat in six elections for Social Credit, narrowly lost his party's nomination to Victoria lawyer Foster Isherwood, 49, of 3615 Cadboro Bay. There has been some speculation since then that Tisdalle may contest the seat as an independent.

With all Greater Victoria seats solidly in the Socred camp in 1969, Anderson and Curtis among others have faced a dilemma in deciding where to run in the forthcoming election.

The Liberal leader is still reported to be unable to make up his mind whether to seek one of two Victoria seats or run in Saanich-Islands, with a

Chichester:

'I Am Weak, Cold'

LONDON (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, Britain's lone round-the-world mariner who has been competing in the transatlantic singlehanded yacht race, was reported Thursday night to be in trouble as he sailed Gipsy Moth V back towards home.

"I am weak and cold," the ailing 70-year-old Chichester signalled by lamp to a Royal Air Force Nimrod search aircraft.

Chichester flashed his message twice to the aircraft, which has been tracking his progress since he was first sighted Tuesday after not being heard from for 11 lays.

Chichester, who defied doctors' orders to tackle the marathon ocean crossing, has dropped out of the race. He is believed to be heading for the French coast. One of his messages to the Nimrod said he hoped his son would meet him in Brest.

Cartier caught by camera

Solution Was A Snap

EDMONTON (CP) — It wasn't all smiles for Richard Douglas Cartier after he'd been on candid camera.

A camera trap, devised by Arthur Rees 12 years ago after his home was broken into, was the instrument of Cartier's arrest in April when it snapped a picture of him entering the Rees home carrying a gun.

A burglar alarm, connected to a $7.50 camera, alerted a neighbor of the Rees, who were out of town at the time. Police were called and told about the camera. The film was developed by the department's identification branch.

A short time later, police arrested two youths on a charge of possession housebreaking tools. While they were being booked into police cells, the constable who developed the film recognized one of them as the youth in the housebreaking picture.

Cartier, 16, pleaded guilty in provincial judge's court Wednesday to break and enter

Navy Vet Charged as Hijacker

DETROIT (UPI) — A 28-year-old jobless navy veteran was charged Thursday with air piracy as the hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner over Indiana Saturday with $502,000 in ransom.

Martin Joseph McNally had $12 in his possession when FBI agents arrested him late Wednesday night near his home in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb about 150 miles from Peru, Ind., where the ransom money was found in a soybean field Monday.

Fingerprints found in the American Airlines 727 jetliner linked Martin with the hijacking, Welch said.

It had been thought the hijacker of the plane, which was commandeered as it was en route from St. Louis to Tulsa, Okla., Friday night, would be found dead near the spot where a farmer found the money, intact in a mail pouch.

There was evidence, said Welch, "that when the hijacker leaped from the plane, the money, his guns and his trousers were ripped away by the tremendous shock of the jet blast."

"We thought the blast would kill him," said Welch at a pre-dawn news conference following McNally's arrest.

AP, UPI, Reuter

President Nixon said in Washington Thursday night the U.S. and North Vietnam have agreed to resume the Paris peace talks. He said the administration has agreed to resume the suspended Vietnam negotiations on Thursday, July 13.

However, Nixon emphasized the move is being made "on the assumption that the North Vietnamese are prepared to negotiate in a constructive and serious way."

Nixon apparently erred in a reference to the date of the resumption. He said the talks would be renewed April 13, but apparently meant July 13, a Thursday, and the normal meeting day before the negotiations were broken off in April. And a few minutes later he spoke of a July resumption.

"I've already indicated that we will be returning to negotiations in July," Nixon told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference. "That is the important area to watch."

At the outset of his first broadcast news conference in more than a year, Nixon was asked whether he could say that the war in Vietnam will be ended by next Jan. 20, when his term expires.

He recited the record of troop withdrawals, reduced U.S. casualties and spending, and administration peace offers.

Nixon said the only thing the administration has not done is to agree to a Communist government in Saigon, which he said would "reward aggression . . . and would dishonor the United States of America."

Nixon said the effect of the American mining of North Vietnam harbors and the bombing has been that "the situation in Vietnam has been turned around."

Press Talks Broken

Talks between Victoria Press Ltd. and the Victoria Newspaper Council of Unions broke off Thursday.

No future meetings have been scheduled. The two sides are in a legal position to strike or lock out.

"Negotiations came to a standstill today," said J. C. Melville, general manager of Victoria Press Ltd. "However, this is not usual in discussions of this kind. The important thing is that both sides are intent on seeking a settlement and are now exploring ways that will bring this about."

Still in dispute are wages, pensions and term of agreement. Other matters peculiar to individual unions are reportedly still unresolved.

The five unions, bargaining together as a council for the first time, are the newspaper guild, typographical union, printing pressmen, stereotypers and mailers. They represent 330 employees of the morning Colonist and evening Times.

McGovern's Delegates Decimated

Associated Press

Senator George McGovern, trembling with anger, said Thursday he will not support the Democratic ticket if his own quest is denied and the presidential nomination goes to a rival who helped strip him of 151 California delegates.

Senator Hubert Humphrey, whose allies led the California challenge, declared his prospects "have markedly improved."

Senator Edmund Muskie's campaign manager said his man is "back in the race very strong." Muskie smiled and said the Democratic national convention will be more interesting now.

The political storm broke over the verdict of the Democratic credentials committee, which voted 72 to 66 to take from McGovern more than half the delegates he won by capturing the California presidential primary June 6.

The national convention itself will make the final decision.

Sample of new licence

All new drivers licences issued in B.C. starting Tuesday will carry a color photograph of the holder for identification purposes and will be the size and shape of a credit card.

Attorney-General Lesie Peterson introduced the new system at a press conference in the Motor Vehicle Branch offices here late Thursday and was presented with his own new-style driver's licence by motor vehicle superintendent Ray Hadfield.

Photographs will be taken at local licence offices at the time of application and motorists will be issued an interim licence for use during the processing period. New licences carrying pictures will be mailed to the applicants.

Petesson said the new system was inzroduced primarily to "make identification easier and assist law enforcemenz agencies."

Headded that with the point system now in effect in B.C. motorists who lose their right to drive must be able to be closely checked by police.

The new credit card format the attojney-general said, is recognition of the fact that the driver's licence has become an almost universal form of identification.

Renewals of driver's licences will cost the same — $5 — under the new system, Hadfield later told reporters, but duplicates will be issued in the new format with picture for $2 instead of the old fee of 50 cents.

The motor vehicles superintendent said it wases timated wity the increased interest anticipated in the new form of licences about 35,000 would be issued in the first month.

A Tornto firm, Indenticard Ltd., has a contract to provide cameras and processing of the pictures of licence holders at a cost of 56 cents each. It is expected there will be a roll-over of some 1.8 million licences in the next five year period.

The number of drivers' licences currently issued in B.C. is about $1.25 million.

The attorney-general said the $5, five-year driver's licence issued in B.C. is "one of the best bargains you can get anywhere in Canada today. The licence will be useful as a positive means of identification in connection with driving, but for other purposes as well."

Courtenay Soroptimists Meet

PARKSVILLE — Close to 100 members and guests of the Soroptimist Club of Courtenay gathered at the Island Hall Hotel, here recently for an installation dinner and entertainment.

The address of welcome was given by retiring president Phyl Harlock and officers were installed by Helen Towler of Victoria, a life member and charter member of the club.

Incoming executive installed by Miss Towler were president, Ruth Dixon, vice-president, Alice Potts, recording secretary, Katherine Salter, corresponding secretary, Mildred Jeffries, treasurer, Iris Klaver, one year director, Kay Jancowski, two-year director, Florence Davenport.

An impressive candlelight ceremony pointed out the five points of the Soroptimist pledge. In her farewell address Mrs. Harlock spoke of achievements of the past year saying that she is particularly proud of the work done at the school for deaf children. Scholarships, adoption of children through the Save The Children Fund, help for anyone in need and many other projects are among those undertaken by the Courtenay Club.

Guest speaker William Kirby, a graduate student in the arts at the University of B.C., gave an informative address on Eskimo art which he has studied extensively.

The marked change in materials used was very apparent as going back about 2,000 years ivory and bone also wood formed the basis for Eskimo works of art while contemporary work is almost all of soapstone.

Designs have changed considerably also to an almost abstract art form while ancient works used animals as models a great deal.

At the close of the program Mrs. Harlock presented gifts to Miss Towler and also presented a silver flower bowl and candlesticks to the Courtenay Club for use at future ceremonies.

Recipient of Kidneys Doing Well

COWICHAN STATION — For the first time in five months Michael Hawkes, 47, of Cowichan Station can rest easy.

He has lived without kidneys since last February and after a rush trip to Vancouver General Hospital 10 days ago to receive a matched pair, Hawkes is reported to be in good spirits and doing well.

He talked with his family Wednesday after coming out of the hospital's intensive care unit.

Hawkees had suffered from diseased kidneys for 17 years and was finally forced to have them both removed.

While waiting for a transplant Hawkes made two trips a week to a Victoria hospital to have his blood cleansed through a kidney machine.

As each session lasted 12 hours he was eager to receive kidneys in order to free himself from the limitations the machine placed on his life. As well as the trips to Victoria, Hawkes had to stay near his telephone in case a matched pair of kidneys were found for him.

The call came June 19 at 5:30 p.m. and Hawkes was told he had an hour and a half to be at the Vancouver hospital to receive the transplant. His wife Lois, packed his bag and chartered a plane from the Duncan airport and he made it.

After the six-hour operation, which the doctors said had gone well, Hawkes was placed in intensive care. His wife and two teen-age daughters left last Wednesday for Vancouver after receiving his phone call.

Teachers To Test Levy Request

COURTENAY — Professional conscience is the name which has been given to a group of teachers, who have established a fund to aid Victoria teacher Byron Barker and New Westminster teacher Mrs. Esther Hall.

Baraker and Mrs. Hall are seeking to determine through the courts, whether or not a levy of one days pay, made by the British Columbia Teachers Federation, is legal.

Three Courtenay teachers, Delbert Doll, Doug McRae and John Stickney are signing officers for the fund. Doll, a Socred provincial candidate, said in an interview that contributions from any one will be accepted at Box 3, 112, Courtenay.

Gerd Kaefer, president of the Comox District Teachers' Association said he had no comment on the formation of the group because he had not heard of it before.

Putting the Fleet Up

When fishing fleet is in at Ucluelet there's hardly berth to spare. Fleet is actually from many Island ports including Victoria and Nanaimo. Ucluelet and Tofino are favorite haunts of west coast fleet.

Square One for Gold River

By BETTY MacMILLAN
Colonist Correspondent

GOLD RIVER — This west coast Island community again faces the problem of having no doctor — less than one year after a medic set up practice here following a six-week plea by the community for medical services.

Dr. Edward Mulligan, who came from Sackville, New Brunswick last September, has announced he will be leaving Gold River for Woodstock, Va., July 15.

His announcement coincides with a disclosure by the chairman of the community's health and welfare commiteee that a contract in the neighborhood of $80,000 has been let for construction of a long-sought medical diagnostic treatment centre.

The contract, said Mrs. Mae Stewart, was awarded by the Comox-Strathcona Regional District to Turner Construction Ltd. of Port Alberni.

The centre, she said, will include a three-bed holding clinic for patients awaiting transfer 57 miles to hospital at Campbell River; facilities for a public health nurse, visiting dentist and optometrist.

The centre will be located on Trumpet Drive behind the 2,000-resident village's only shopping plaza.

Mulligan
. . . goes July 15

Mulligan said he is leaving the community for personal, family and business reasons.

He said one of the biggest hardships a physician has to face in a community such as Gold River is lack of a hospital where it is possible to keep up to date with medical advances and techniques.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons has been advised, he said, but he could not speculate on how many — if any — doctors might be available to replace him when he leaves.

"The area would probably be suited best to an older physician — possibly someone who is semi-retired," he said.

With the health clinic on the horizon, it might be easier now to attract a doctor, he added.

Mrs. Stewart said the village will be sorry to see Mulligan go and that it will be difficult to replace him.

Mulligan took his medical training in Dublin, Ireland. He interned in Dublin and Norfolk, Va., where he set up a resident family practice for two years before settling in New Brunswick in November 1970.

He is married and has a three-year-old son.

Gold River went six weeks without a doctor before Mulligan came — after the village's previous doctor retired because of health reasons.

Residents of the village urged Health Minister Ralph Loffmark at that time to use power granted him to appoint a doctor for the village. An order-in-council passed in July of last year gave Loffmark the power to grant, deny or control a doctor's right to practice in a particular hospital.

However, Dr. W. G. McClure, registrar of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, said at that time the order did not give the minister power to send doctors where he wanted them.

"If Mr. Loffmark tried to appoint a doctor to an area he would not be opposed by the college, but the doctor approached would probably tell him where to go," he said.

Since then the cabinet order has been amended somewhat, to soften the power.

Lydia Spreads Wings for Greece

NANAIMO — Lydia Del Rio Turino, the Cuban stowaway who won the hearts of the Nanaimo community — and subsequently Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey who gave her permission to stay in Canada — left Vancouver for Greece this week.

Lydia, a Cuban citizen, was found aboard the Cyprus registered freighter Dorine Papalios when it docked in Nanaimo Feb. 8.

Nanaimo "adopted" the girl — who told tales of religious persecution and other Cuban restrictions — and Mackasey took a personal interest in the case and arranged landed immigrant status for her on "humanitarian" grounds.

Later, in the spring, she disclosed she was married to a Greek seaman who had been working aboard the freighter at the time of her defection from Cuba. She then applied for permission to leave Canada and join her husband in Greece.

Harry Miller, immigration officer in Nanaimo, confirmed Thursday that permission had been granted and that the girl had left by air Monday of this week.

Forest Talks Do Badly

Thursday brought another reported failure in the attempt to solve the contract dispute that has closed down the coast forest industry.

"Basically, nothing happened," said International Woodworkers of America negotiator Syd Thompson after the latest meeting of the IWA and Forest Industrial Relations.

"The industry clarified some items, but it didn't move on the monetary items."

Thompson is president of the big Vancouver local. He told the Colonist Thursday's critical meeting with F.I.R. lasted about 2½ hours.

The IWA coast negotiating committee was to meet today to plot its next step.

There have been conflicting reports on whether or not the committee will put the industry's final offer to the 30,000 IWA members on strike. If it does, it will have to decide whether or not to recommend acceptance.

The last position of F.I.R., which represents the forest companies, was a 73 cent-an-hour increase over two years on a base rate of $3.72. The union's final demand has been for $1 an hour over the same period. It had originally asked this amount over one year.

John Billings, F.I.R. president, said in a statement the industry had clarified eight points "in line with most of their (IWA) requests they brought up at Monday's meeting."

"Despite the fact they have been given an extremely good agreement by the industry, it seems impossible to satisfy the union negotiators," Billings said.

He said the IWA negotiators raise new problems at each meeting.

No other meetings have been scheduled between the sides.

Prior to Thursday's meeting, some union negotiators had expressed optimism. They said they felt a settlement would be reached.

The strike began officially eight days ago. It had actually begun in stages at midnight June 14 when the master contract expired.

Once general settlement does come the industry will still be in trouble, according to the 800 fallers who began a wildcat strike in mid-April.

The fallers, demanding an industry-wide pricing formula, have said they don't want the IWA negotiating committee bargaining for them.

They have said their own strike, which had already begun to slow the industry, will likely continue long after the rest of the IWA members have settled.

School Honors Given

CUMBERLAND — School trustee Mrs. Ruth McKellar was a special guest when closing exercises were held at the elementary school Wednesday.

She presented prizes to winners of a poster contest used to promote a referendum — which passed last December — authorizing construction of a new elementary school.

Receiving poster prizes were Terry Leung, grade 7; Grant Franceschini, grade 6; Lisa Montgomery, grade 5; Leanne Miron, grade 4, and Kris Gschwender, grade 3.

The grade 7 academic award was presented to Marilyn Boyce and the citizenship plaque to Russell Clark.

Special service awards were given to Trudy Bortolott and Lynette Souther, who looked after the milk supply for those who brought lunch to school.

Regional Board To Fight

Gulf Island Airstrip Still Opposed

The Capital Regional Board has decided to fight construction of a private airstrip on Salt Spring Island in the B.C. Supreme Court.

Following a meeting behind closed doors Wednesday, the regional board instructed its lawyers to take the case to the Supreme Court.

A preliminary injunction was issued against West Ganges Holdings Ltd. on May 24, but one week later, Mr. Justice M. L. Tyrwhitt-Drake declared the regional board's application for an extension of the injunction invalid.

The airstrip in question is 40 feet wide and 2,000 feet long. The area in which it is located, is zoned agricultural which includes recreational uses.

Duncan Crisis Centre Quickly Finds Its Niche

By KLAUS MUENTER
Colonist Correspondent

DUNCAN — Undoubtedly one of the most important and significant humanitarian institutions here is the Crisis Centre.

It started about a month ago in an upstairs office in the Whittome Building on Station Street. Centre director Ralph Yontez, who helped to establish a crisis centre at Nanaimo about a year ago, said the Duncan centre has already handled between 45 and 50 calls over the two crisis telephone lines at 748-8134.

Now the centre has 40 screened and trained volunteers who man the two telephones from 8 a.m. until midnight every day. Interconnected into the centre is a staff of 10 young people working under a $16,500 federal Opportunities for Youth grant and another two are employed under the Non-Medical Use of Drugs program.

For the latter program the federal government gave a 10-week $2,000 grant. Yontez, who came to Duncan in April, said he finally was asked to help with the establishment of the Duncan Crisis Centre.

Although there is no doubt in Yontez' mind about the local centre's success, he stressed that more volunteers are needed to do a more comprehensive job. Besides helping with crisis centre work the young people employed under the Opportunities for Youth program are now engaged in compiling a very detailed information log with every conceivable agency listed in this area that can be of assistance in the varied emergencies.

Besides carrying out this work the young people are also on call 24 hours a day to aid people in distress. On various occasions members of a "flying squad" have dealt with emergencies on the spot. In one instance a volunteer of the special assistance group sat for two hours very early one morning with a man who had beaten his wife.

Yontez said emergencies dealt with so far ranged from suicide prevention, parents asking for drug information, to young people who came to the centre to ask where they could stay over night. The director said on several occasions people have come directly to the centre to ask for help and advice.

Yontez said the crisis centre has three main objectives:

- To aid, assist and refer persons seeking the solution of problems presented by their mental or emotional condition in times of personal crisis or emergency;
- To co-ordinate existing community resources in order to resolve individual crisis by linking such persons with qualified agencies, personnel and services;
- To promote mental health and well-being of the Cowichan Valley community.

Briefly relating the centre's history that began last summer, Yontez explained that a large number of concerned people worked very hard to realize the project. Jack Hutton, who as administrator of the local mental health clinic fully appreciates the centre's work, singled out three people whose help has been particularly valuable — Anne Murray, Steve Carreck and Bob Moss, president of the Cowichan branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association.

The Crisis Centre board is now headed by Peter Yelland who is a past president of the local mental health association. Yelland said, "My experience in the mental health field showed me that such a centre would be essential in the Cowichan Valley because of the many problems.

"The sad endings of many cases in the past could have probably been avoided if there had been such a crisis centre. These people (staff members of the centre) have already found gaps in the services which operate in this community.

"Sometimes even the discovery of a gap in services seems like the discovery of a sore in a body. The discovery of gaps also sometimes can create hostility amongst local residents who have not been aware of the problems which exist."

Yontez stressed, "Even though the centre is financed by an Opportunities for Youth grant there is no intention by the board or the project workers to have the crisis centre become only youth orientated. The centre is functioning to benefit the entire community.

"Our hope is to cut across all age groups. We are quite aware of all the multitudes of attitudes existing in any community and our function is not to teach or preach but to understand."

Yontez added people who have human warmth and understanding and who want to help with the crisis centre should contact him.

'Defender of Nature's Sanctuaries'

Mourns Passing of 'Murdered' Garden

Scott contemplates thing of beauty' in 'murdered' garden

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

"You made me a professional murderer of beautiful flowers and plants . . . an agent to the starving of birds, bees and insects."

Those were the words of Bill Scott as he handed a bunch of "noxious weeds" to Steve Powell, an employee of Victoria's parks department.

Scott, contender in several aldermanic and mayoralty races, "lighthouse" philosopher and self-professed "defender of nature's sanctuaries in Victoria," was on the warpath again Wednesday — this time against "the city's monopoly on bureaucracy."

Scott had run afoul of the city's noxious weeds bylaw and was ordered to cut the "tall grass, weeds, and blackberry" which bloomed on his property at 1003 Carberry Gardens.

Scott obliged, but not before he had a landscape architect evaluate the "weeds."

According to Richard Collier, the landscape architect, the assortment contained wheat grass, wild oats, broom grass, orchard grass, velvet grass, foxtail barley, rye grass, and blue grass.

Other plants, according to the report, included tufted vetch, hawk's beard, clover, holly and ivy. All these plants could also be found in Beacon Hill Park.

Collier called it "a fascinating variety of plants to be found in what is often termed a noxious weeds patch."

The plants, the report said, are important to birds and bees for both food and shelter.

"Areas such as these are often seen as unorganized, discordant eyesores by those who cannot understand the ways of nature, but if one were to take time off from lawnmowing, clipping, weeding, etc., to view this area with an unimpaired vision, one would see a beautiful garden," the report said.

Bureaucracy, he told Powell, was on the loose in Victoria. Powell shouldn't feel too bad; he was just one of them. There were many more in every department of city hall, Scott said.

With that assurance, Scott left the office, followed by a reporter and a photographer.

"Man, proud man, dressed in a little brief
authority
Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
As to make the angles weep."

Victoria city hall, he added, was full of such men.

Scott, a Yoga enthusiast, said later at his property on Carberry Gardens, that Yoga exercises not only are good for the health but they lead to the contemplation of beauty and beautiful thoughts.

He took up a position of meditation in what he termed his "murdered" garden and contemplated a weathered tree root which he says is "a thing of beauty."

"But those bureaucrats at City Hall have told me to get rid of it, too, or they'll do it themselves and charge me for it," Scott said.

Chichester:

'I Am Weak, Cold'

LONDON (AP) — Sir Francis Chichester, Britain's lone round-the-world mariner who has been competing in the transatlantic singlehanded yacht race, was reported Thursday night to be in trouble as he sailed Gipsy Moth V back toward home.

"I am weak and cold," the ailing 70-year-old Chichester signalled by lamp to a Royal Air Force Nimrod search aircraft.

Chichester flashed his message twice to the aircraft, which has been tracking his progress since he was first sighted Tuesday after not being heard from for 11 days.

Chichester, who defied doctors' orders to tackle the marathon ocean crossing, has dropped out of the race. He is believed to be heading for the French coast. One of his messages to the Nimrod said he hoped his son would meet him in Brest.

DETROIT (UPI) — A 28-year-old jobless navy veteran was charged Thursday with air piracy as the hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner over Indiana Saturday with $502,000 in ransom.

Martin Joseph McNally had $12 in his possession when FBI agents arrested him late Wednesday night near his home in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb about 150 miles from Peru, Ind., where the ransom money was found in a soybean field Monday.

B.C. Awaits Word With Bated Breath

- Breath test laws still workable, says Lang, Page 3

Just what did the Supreme Court of Canada mean Thursday when it ruled a motorist has a right to speak to his lawyer before agreeing to take a breath analysis test?

Police forces in Greater Victoria weren't sure and were awaiting instructions from the provincial attorney-general's department before making major changes in procedure.

The attorney-general's department, in turn, was awaiting clarification from Ottawa and legal sources predicted it might be a day or two before it would be known if Canada's official breath-analysis machine for suspected drinking drivers is useful or not.

The key question facing police is whether the highest court's ruling that a motorist can speak to his lawyer means over the telephone or face to face.

In Victoria, Police Chief John Gregory said there would really be no change in procedure if it meant only over the telephone. He pointed out all accused have the right to make a phone call and that could be to a lawyer.

But Canadian courts will not accept breath-analysis machine results if they are taken more than two hours after the incident that caused

Curtis

. . . tangle with Anderson?

He'll Seek Tisdalle Seat

Tory Tag for Curtis

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis will announce this morning that he will seek the Progressive Conservative nomination in the provincial riding of Saanich and the Islands.

The formal announcement of his candidacy will be made by Curtis and B.C. Conservative leader Derril Warren at a news conference scheduled for 10 a.m. today.

Curtis' decision to run for the Tories in Saanich-Islands raises the prospect of a head-on clash between Liberals and Conservatives in the riding with indications that B.C. Liberal leader David Anderson may also choose to run there.

Malcolm Anderson, president of the Saanich Liberal Association, said Thursday a provincial candidate would be nominated July 10 and he told reporters he has been pressing his brother David to run in this riding.

"As president I want David to seek the nomination in Saanich and I've been pressing him to run," Anderson said. David Anderson will make his final decision known at a news conference tentatively scheduled for the Red Lion Inn, in Saanich, one week from today.

In 1969, the Liberals ran a poor third in Saanich and the Islands, tallying only roughly one-third of the votes gained by Socred John Tisdale. The Conservatives didn't run a candidate in the riding in the last election.

This time, however, Tisdalle, who previously had won the seat in six elections for Social Credit, narrowly lost his party's nomination to Victoria lawyer Foster Isherwood, 49, of 3615 Cadboro Bay. There has been some speculation since then that Tisdalle may contest the seat as an independent.

With all Greater Victoria seats solidly in the Socred camp in 1969, Anderson and Curtis among others have faced a dilemma in deciding where to run in the forthcoming election.

The Liberal leader is still reported to be unable to make up his mind whether to seek one of two Victoria seats or run in Saanich-Islands, with a

Cartier caught by camera

Solution Was A Snap

EDMONTON (CP) — It wasn't all smiles for Richard Douglas Cartier after he'd been on candid camera.

A camera trap, devised by Arthur Rees 12 years ago after his home was broken into, was the instrument of Cartier's arrest in April when it snapped a picture of him entering the Rees home carrying a gun.

A burglar alarm, connected to a $7.50 camera, alerted a neighbor of the Rees, who were out of town at the time. Police were called and told about the camera. The film was developed by the department's identification branch.

A short time later, police arrested two youths on a charge of possession of housebreaking tools. While they were being booked into police cells, the constable who developed the film recognized one of them as the youth in the housebreaking picture.

AP, UPI, Reuter

President Nixon said in Washington Thursday night the U.S. and North Vietnam have agreed to resume the Paris peace talks. He said the administration has agreed to resume the suspended Vietnam negotiations on Thursday, July 13.

However, Nixon emphasized the move is being made "on the assumption that the North Vietnamese are prepared to negotiate in a constructive and serious way."

Nixon apparently erred in a reference to the date of the resumption. He said the talks would be renewed April 13, but apparently meant July 13, a Thursday, and the normal meeting day before the negotiations were broken off in April. And a few minutes later he spoke of a July resumption.

"I've already indicated that we will be returning to negotiations in July," Nixon told a nationally televised and broadcast news conference. "That is the important area to watch."

At the outset of his first broadcast news conference in more than a year, Nixon was asked whether he could say that the war in Vietnam will be ended by next Jan. 20, when his term expires.

He recited the record of troop withdrawals, reduced U.S. casualties and spending, and administration peace offers.

Nixon said the only thing the administration has not done is to agree to a Communist government in Saigon, which he said would "reward aggression . . . and would dishonor the United States of America."

Nixon said the effect of the American mining of North Vietnam harbors and the bombing has been that "the situation in Vietnam has been turned around."

'Not Unusual'

Press Talks Broken

Talks between Victoria Press Ltd. and the Victoria Newspaper Council of Unions broke off Thursday.

No future meetings have been scheduled. The two sides are in a legal position to strike or lock out.

"Negotiations came to a standstill today," said J. C. Melville, general manager of Victoria Press Ltd. "However, this is not unusual in discussions of this kind. The important thing is that both sides are intent on seeking a settlement and are now exploring ways that will bring this about."

Still in dispute are wages, pensions and term of agreement. Other matters peculiar to individual unions are reportedly still unresolved.

The five unions, bargaining together as a council for the first time, are the newspaper guild, typographical union, printing pressmen, stereotypers and mailers. They represent 330 employees of the morning Colonist and evening Times.

'Shabby Dealing'

McGovern's Delegates Decimated

Associated Press

Senator George McGovern, trembling with anger, said Thursday he will not support the Democratic ticket if his own quest is denied and the presidential nomination goes to a rival who helped strip him of 151 California delegates.

His challengers took new hope for their campaigns to overtake the South Dakota senator.

Senator Hubert Humphrey, whose allies led the California challenge, declared his prospects "have markedly improved."

Senator Edmund Muskie's campaign manager said his man is "back in the race very strong." Muskie smiled and said the Democratic national convention will be more interesting now.

The political storm broke over the verdict of the Democratic credentials committee, which voted 72 to 66 to take from McGovern more than half the delegates he won by capturing the California presidential primary June 6.

The national convention itself will make the final decision.

Navy Vet Charged as Hijacker

DETROIT (UPI) — A 28-year-old jobless navy veteran was charged Thursday with air piracy as the hijacker who parachuted from a jetliner over Indiana Saturday with $502,000 in ransom.

Martin Joseph McNally had $12 in his possession when FBI agents arrested him late Wednesday night near his home in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb about 150 miles from Peru, Ind., where the ransom money was found in a soybean field Monday.

Fingerprints found in the American Airlines 727 jetliner linked Martin with the hijacking, Welch said.

It had been thought the hijacker of the plane, which was commandeered as it was en route from St. Louis to Tulsa, Okla., Friday night, would be found dead near the spot where a farmer found the money, intact in a mail pouch.

There was evidence, said Welch, "that when the hijacker leaped from the plane, the money, his guns and his trousers were ripped away by the tremendous shock of the jet blast."

"We thought the blast would kill him," said Welch at a pre-dawn news conference following McNally's arrest.

Lewis Hits Quebec Wing

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Leader David Lewis repudiated Thursday a new program on federalism launched by the NDP's Quebec wing, leaving open the possibility that adherents to the Quebec platform would be drummed out of the party.

Lewis called a news conference hastily to denounce the program even before the Quebec executive had released it.

The disagreement followed the expulsion Sunday of the left-wing Waffle group from the Ontario NDP.

Lewis said parts of the Quebec program, including stress on the eventuality of Quebec's separation, is clearly contrary to the policies of the NDP adopted at a national convention in April, 1971.

Lewis refused to say what the party's reaction would be to candidates in a federal election who espouse the deviation proposal of the Quebec executive.

All new drivers licences issued in B.C. starting Tuesday will carry a color photograph of the holder for identification purposes and will be the size and shape of a credit card.

Attorney-General Lesie Peterson introduced the new system at a press conference in the Motor Vehicle Branch offices here late Thursday and was presented with his own new-style driver's licence by motor vehicle superintendent Ray Hadfield.

Photographs will be taken at local licence offices at the time of application and motorists will be issued an interim licence for use during the processing period. New licences carrying pictures will be mailed to the applicants.

Peterson said the new system was introduced primarily to "make identification easier and assist law enforcement agencies."

He added that with the point system now in effect in B.C. motorists who lose their right to drive must be able to be closely checked by police.

The new credit card format the attorney-general said, is recognition of the fact that the driver's licence has become an almost universal form of identification.

Renewals of driver's licences will cost the same — $5 — under the new system, Hadfield later told reporters, but duplicates will be issued in the new format with picture for $2 instead of the old fee of 50 cents.

The motor vehicles superintendent said it was estimated with the increased interest anticipated in the new form of licences about 35,000 would be issued in the first month.

The Toronto firm, Indenticard Ltd., has a contract to provide cameras and processing of the pictures of licence holders at a cost of 56 cents each. It is expected there will be a roll-over of some 1.8 million licences in the next five year period.

The number of drivers' licences currently issued in B.C. is about 1.25 million.

The attorney-general said the $5, five-year driver's licence issued in B.C. is "one of the best bargains you can get anywhere in Canada today. The licence will be useful as a positive means of identification in connection with driving, but for other purposes as well."
